WITH BROKEN LEG MAN CRAWLS MILE TO REACH CABIN

Medford, Ore., March 17.—Forced to crawl more than a mile with both bones of his left leg shattered and then shout for two hours before aid reached him, was the harrowing experience of Charles Grey, a homesteader on Little Applegate, who is at the Sacred Heart hospital for treatment.

Grey, who lives alone, was cutting trees about a mile from his cabin when one fell on him, crushing his left leg. He then started to crawl to his cabin, which he reached after three hours of terrible suffering.

When his cabin was reached he began shouting for help. It was another two hours before his cries were heard. Dr. Conroy, of this city, was summoned by telephone and he brought Grey to the hospital. They were forced to carry him two miles on a litter to reach an automobile.

Rumor of Car Factory at Springfield.

It is rumored on what is considered good authority that one of the great car building companies of the United States is contemplating erecting at Springfield a large factory for the manufacture of cars. It is impossible to verify the correctness of the report, but it is considered plausible in view of the moral certainty that the railway company will establish large shops there on the completion of the Klamath cutoff.

The rumor is said to have come from an official of the Booth-Kelly Lumber company, who is said to have obtained his information from Manager Campbell of the S. P. company.—Register.

GROVE LAD LEADING MAN IN U. OF O. PRODUCTION

UNIVERSITY PLAY WILL BE STAGED HERE MARCH 27

Carlton E. Spencer Takes Leading Role in "The Servant in the House," Twentieth Century Masterpiece.

The character of "Robert" with his devotion to his "sossingers," his contempt of hypocrisy even in high places, his shrewd common sense—that is so uncommon—his all important dryness, as played by Professor Reddie, is inimitable.

The title role, "Manson," is made by Carlton E. Spencer, to be not of this earth, earthy, but to convey a strong spirituality that almost hides the human personality of the "Bishop of Benares," who builds churches of the souls of men and not of bricks of clay. Spencer makes you forget that he himself is a student, a man, and an actor—you see him only as an incarnate message to mankind.

Miss Janet Young plays "Mary" with a sweetness of expression, manner and voice, and sympathetic understanding of the part that more than once brings the tears very close to the surface of even the most hardened playgoer.

Miss Hilda Brant, makes "Auntie," the Vicar's wife, seem but a part of real everyday life transplanted to the stage. One may think "Auntie" mistaken in her single-minded devotion to her husband above and beyond any and all other considerations, but one cannot but admit the faithfulness of the portrayal.

Alfred Skel's "Bishop of Laneshire" is as good a bit of character acting as one could wish to see, with his surface veneer of eminent respectability cracking every now and then to show the avaricious little soul of the man who makes even his high and holy office pander to his love of money. His horror at actually having sat at a table with a laboring man and a house servant is by Skel made humorously real and really humorous without abating the disgust he is supposed to feel.

"Rogers," the page boy, with his cockney accent, his pride of being born "middle class," his love and respect for "Manson" struggling with his inability to understand his fellow servant, is handled by Walter R. Dimm, with a conception of the part that makes one forget the actor.

next year and will result in heavy expense to many who will be compelled to send their children to some city, and great inconvenience to not financially able to send their children away from the city.

Many of those who will vote on the bond issue will do so on some cause of lack of information and expressed the opinion that the information needed and probably would be cured if voters knew what the voting for. Among those who have been some talk of asking the board to rescind its call for the election, then give the voters information as to what is proposed done in the event of the election successful and then have another election called.

Even among those who favor bonds, however, the opinion prevails that they will be greatly outvoted.
