Studying the Market
 EUGENE REGISTER
 The course that is being followed by E. C. Lathrop, a berry grower near Cottage Grove, is worthy of careful study, for it offers a most interesting sidelight on successful farming methods. Mr. Lathrop believes that he will find a better market for his berries if they are preserved in an attractive form, so instead of selling them fresh he is making them into jellies, which will be sold under his own label. The point is simply this: Mr. Lathrop is getting out of the rut. He has studied the market and believes that he will get a better price for his berries in the form of jelly than if he sold them in the customary way. His method is that of the careful manufacturer who decides to his own satisfaction what the people want and then gives it to them. The selling end of the farmer's business is too often neglected. In every community there are men whose ability to produce a large crop every year is above the average, yet they are not as prosperous as it would seem that they should be. The trouble lies in lack of selling ability. Every year this fact is being more fully demonstrated that success in farming—as in other business—does not depend upon the ability to secure large production. Finding a profitable market is equally important. The value of a paper to a community can be accurately measured by what outsiders think of it. The Sentinel is willing to be thus measured. It pays to read the ads. in the Sentinel.

Folks Do Read Ads. in Live Wire

That folks read the ads. in The Sentinel and that a real bargain is appreciated, was demonstrated Saturday, on which day The Sentinel had advertised to give ten subscriptions at 89 cents each. Five were to be given in the forenoon and five in the afternoon. The five for the forenoon went to subscribers waiting for the doors to open and four times the allotted number for the day were applied for, thirty applications having to be refused after the allotted number were given. China Pheasant Season Oct. 15. A mistake in the caption over the article in last week's Sentinel concerning the opening of the hunting season gave the impression that the China pheasant season opened the same day as the deer season. The China pheasant season opens October 15, as was stated in the body of the article. It pays to read the ads. in the Sentinel.

HAS RIPE TOMATOES ON MARKET JULY FOURTEENTH

Premier Tomato Grower Has Usual Forward Crop.

Geo. Walker's Prediction That He Would Have First Fruit on the Market Comes True Sooner Than Expected.

True to his prediction that his would be among the earliest, if not the earliest, in this vicinity George Walker's tomatoes have justified his prediction by ripening some time before he expected them to. Under ordinary circumstances Mr. Walker counts on having the ripe fruit about August 1, but the first tomatoes were picked this year on July 14. Mr. Walker says that all indications are for a bumper crop and the tomatoes are large and smooth. Mr. Walker takes pains in caring for his vines, planting them about 42 inches apart either way, pruning them heavily when young, and keeping them free from bugs and pests of all sorts. They mature very rapidly under his care, for the vines now bearing ripe fruit were set out about the middle of May. Mr. Walker understands the marketing of his product perfectly. He picks the tomatoes when they are turning a good healthy red, culls out all inferior fruit, wipes each tomato carefully and packs them in 20-pound boxes. Needless to say they are tomatoes deluxe and bring the top price.

COBURG IS ANOTHER VICTIM OF GROVE BALL SLUGGERS

Fast Visiting Team Worsted by Score of 4 to 3

Game Is Featured With "Pep" and Grove Twirler Does Not Give Safe Hit in Seven Consecutive Innings.

In a game featured with plenty of "pep," bringing out two double plays during the nine stanzas of play, Cottage Grove annexed another game on the local field Sunday from the speed boys representing Coburg in the baseball world. There was excitement from the time the first batter faced the pitcher until the fatal ninth and the winning run had crossed the pan. Both slabsters were working in big league form, backed up with sensational fielding, such as is seldom seen on semi-prof. diamonds. In serving the twisters, Earl topped his opponent a bit and not a safe bingle was registered against him after the second inning.

Coburg began counting in the first, getting away with a tally on two safeties and an error. The Grovers came through with a pair in their half and Coburg tied it up in the second, the tie remaining tied until the eighth. In this inning Coburg rang the bell without the semblance of a hit, two free transports to the initial sack—mixed up with an error being responsible for the counter. The broke the tie and put Coburg one tally to the good. Sutherland was pitching hard to hold the lead which his team-mates had gained and the locals were unable to solve his delivery in this frame. Coburg was easy in the ninth, going out in one, two, three and the boys seemed to be quite satisfied that they had the game stowed away, when, oh, my! where will the counting stop? Brund was given a base, Earl smashed one out for a base, Wright flew to center, Smith scratched a single through the cox, completely populating all three corners. Atkinson got a walk, forcing the tying counter. Brumbaugh connected with one that cut the grass as it traveled through right short, two men crossing the pan before the ball was recovered. Double play engineered in the third by Sutherland, C. Whitaker and N. Whitaker and Wright, Cellers, Atkinson were eye plays and worthy of special mention. one-handed catch by Wright while running backward was easily the feature of the game. Final score 4 to 3.

A SALESMAN

Comes to Town and Sells Things Home Merchants Have in Stock

OF COURSE true patriotism should impel a person to inquire around a little before purchasing from an agent who takes your money and is gone, leaving nothing in the city and paying no taxes on the goods he carries in stock.

But folks are careless about doing this. Even business men themselves sometimes buy from a transient, forgetting for the moment to inquire if a competitor may not carry the article. It has happened that wives of merchants have purchased things from peddlers which their own husbands carried in stock.

The moral is therefore plain that you must continually bring your line of goods before the eyes of those in your territory.

In the Cottage Grove country the proper method is through the advertising columns of The Sentinel.
