Four and Five Generation Pictures

The Sentinel wishes to add to its already wonderful photographic collection some four and five generation pictures. The photographs of old residents displayed on the walls of The Sentinel office have attracted attention and much favorable comment on a climate that will grow such good-looking old people has been made by visitors in the city. We would like to add 25 four and five generation pictures to this collection. We will pay the expense and give one free picture for the trouble. Just go to Armstrong's and have it charged to us.

THE SMALL FACTORY AND THE TARIFF

Importance of Little Mill to Country Compared With Big Mill.

Fibre and Fabric: When we recall the prosperous times prior to the agitation on the tariff it is not unreasonable to ask what has been gained? Before election promises assured us that no legitimate business would be hurt. After election the story is quite different. Mr. Underwood clearly stated to the members of the House of Representatives that the proposed wool reductions would injure some factories of old equipment and those of less advanced business methods would be forced out of business, and that such concerns were not economically entitled to live.

The very life of New England depends upon these little plants employing one hundred hands or less. They furnish the living for the entire population of towns and villages where located, and while not equipped or operated along the most modern lines perhaps, they should not be forced out of business, "put out of the way," as Mr. Underwood expresses it, from any economic theory that they have ceased to be useful. The $1000 a week paid out by the little mill up in some Massachusetts or Maine village means more proportionately than ten times the disbursement by the big, "economically fit to live" plant. The $1000 from the little fellow goes to seventy-five or ninety Americans, who are both producers and consumers, and not a dollar goes out of the country. Kill this little mill and five hundred people comfortably located and satisfied are thrown upon the country seeking to replace other industrial workers. Protect this little mill and five hundred people are given steady work, and families are raised to take their place in the mill as fathers and mothers retire.

In Mr. Underwood's class of "economically unfit to live and should be put out of the way" mills probably more than 50,000 hands are employed, and in much greater proportion than in the big plants the employes have a pretty hard kick.

They can vote, and Mr. Underwood, and especially his New England men in congress, are going to hear from these voters when the time arrives. The economic side of the question does not appeal to men who have made a comfortable living for years in the small, not modern, mills. Such men do know that regular wages have been paid them, and under a protective tariff they were not considered "economically unfit to live," and they are not going to be driven to the wall without a fight, because a great majority of the small town mill people come from good fighting stock. They make mistakes, as do all of us, and no isms of politics, economic buncombe or orator's promises will fool them again for many years. Last fall the gold brick was carefully concealed. The next time the progressiveness of the small town mill worker will be in the direction of safe and sane protection and against men who would kill small industries the same as a butcher kills an ox. The small town mills are going to be hard hit, but the people of these towns will be heard from before the round-up.

WEAR RED CAP OR SHIRT SAYS GAME WARDEN

Many Accidents May Be Prevented by Taking Proper Precautionary Measures.

A letter of caution for guarding against accidental shooting has been sent out over the state by Game Warden William L. Finley in the hope that the usual alarming number of fatalities resulting from accidental shooting may be cut down.

The following suggestions are made: To prevent accidental shooting, every hunter should wear a red cap, shirt or sweater, or some other article of clothing that can easily be identified, from game birds and animals, especially when hunting deer in the forests. Since there is a contrast between red and the color of any bird or animal that is being hunted, this color will serve the best purpose.

Hunters should never shoot at moving brush, leaves or grass with the expectation of killing game. It is dangerous, for the moving object is likely to be a man. Never shoot at any object until you are absolutely positive of identification.

Lost or distress signal: When a man is lost or injured and needs help, a signal by shooting should be given. This signal will be the firing of a gun once, with an intermission of ten seconds before the second shot, then an intermission of sixty seconds, then a third shot. If no answer is received, this signal should be repeated after an intermission of five minutes. The answer to this signal would be a single shot from the rescuing party followed by one recognition shot from the lost man.

For the benefit of those who abhor printers' ink as a prime factor to the advancement of their interests, we should state that Samson—the strong party—was the first man to advertise. He took two solid columns to demonstrate his strength, and several thousand people "tumbled" to the scheme. He brought down the house.—Ex.

YOUR BANK DEPOSITS ROLL UP

Surprisingly if you make it a rule to pay by check only and deposit all your cash at the Bank of Cottage Grove. Then you stop to think before you buy and in many cases thinking means refraining. Ambition to have a good balance prevents many a spending, and thus your deposits roll up.
