Cook Book of Dainty Oyster Recipe upon Request

We all know that a, b, c, d, are vowels, but we don't all know that Oysters can only be secured in the "r" months—the months one letter of which is an "r" most of us know that only in the Sealshipt brand can we be certain that our oysters are above suspicion—that in the Sealshipten and Sealshiptcase we get the oyster in the same prime condition which it leaves the New England oyster bed.

The fact that this is the brand handled by the Metsan Shop would in itself be a guarantee of its being the best.

A Five-Minute Talk Is America's Supreme Achievement in Literature

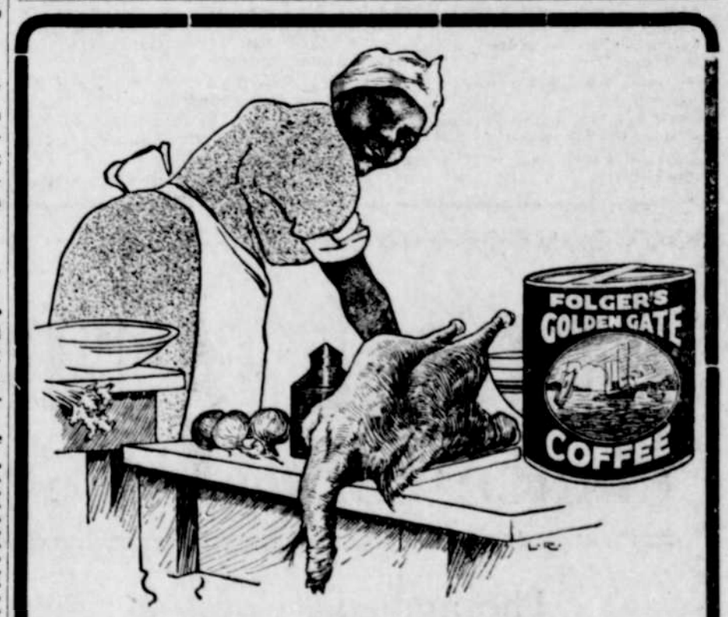
The polished Edward Everett spoke two hours at the Gettysburg dedication. His elaborate oration is forgotten. It was never clearly understood. After him Abraham Lincoln spoke for five minutes on the same topic—drove straight as a rifle bullet to the heart of the matter!—said more that was vital in that five minutes than Everett was able to say in a long afternoon—and said it in short, plain words that sank into the minds of his listeners as boiling water sinks into snow.

His speech—a masterpiece of simplicity—fills only a single page of type, and will not bear the addition or subtraction of a single paragraph or word. That deathless piece of simple talk is today called by foreign critics American's only supreme achievement in literature.

Everett knew, but Lincoln realized, the greatness, the overmastering power of simplicity.

The wise advertiser emulates Lincoln. A few crisp, snappy sentences sell goods where flowery elaboration may not be read and may not be understood even if read.

The Sentinel goes only to people who pay their subscriptions. People who pay their subscriptions pay their other accounts. Those are the kind of people the merchant wishes to reach.



I Don't Know What to Get for Supper

That's a human interest expression.

It touches the heart of every housewife.

"How often I've said that," is her mental comment. But there's no need of being in such a predicament. When you don't know what to get for hubby, just drop in and let our shelves suggest. Or if you wish to 'phone, we have men clerks who know what will appeal to the inner man, and who are at your service to make suggestions.
