Blazing Trails In Glacier National Park With a Pathe Camera Man

To include the wonderful scenery of Glacier National park in the new "See America First" series, Ralph R. Earle, camera man for the Pathe Freres company, recently made a trail blazing tour of unexplored regions in the great national playground. Under the guidance of Tom Dawson, a veteran guide of the Rockies of northwestern Montana, the Pathe man secured some unusual pictures of the waterfalls, mountains, glaciers, rivers and lakes, which make the park more famous for its scenic wonders than the Alps of Switzerland. Always seeking something new and marvelous for the patrons of motion picture theaters all over the world, the Pathe company has sent its northwestern representative into Glacier National park on several trips. Leaving the big hotel at Glacier park station, the Pathe party made a trip over Mount Henry, where a trail is now being built, and came out near Two Medicine camp, one of the beauty spots of the park. For a week the Pathe party, with its pack animals, camping outfit and guides, blazed new trails into remote regions, and beautiful waterfalls, ice fields and picturesque mountain ranges were filmed. The picture under the caption "Blazing Trails In Glacier National Park" was recently released by the Pathe company and is now being shown all over the United States.
