NYEENA KLOSHE ILLAHEE.

The following verses were written by John H. Cradlebaugh, an Oregon newspaper man. The title "Nyeena Kloshe Illahee," is the Chinook name for the Willamette, translated into English as "Song of the Good Country."

Bloom of apple and orchard trees,
Scent of clover and hum of bees;
Spreading oak and towering pine,
Billowing wheat and climbing vine;
Tinkling brook by wild rose traced,
River with balm and willow laced;
Grove and glen, and sun and shade,
Fairest of lands that God has made.

Far as the gladdened eye can see,
Meadow and brook, and flower and tree;
Miles on miles of emerald sward,
Mountains that keep eternal guard;
Pillars of flame in the morning sun,
Pointing a Paradise lost—and won;
Where sundown sleeps with her banners furled,
The emerald gem in the ring of the world.

A POPULAR DEMOCRAT

A peculiar and significant thing about the Wilson administration is the apparent popularity of Mr. Wilson himself with members of all parties and the lack of much severe criticism of his policies from any party.

This is peculiarly striking coming as it does after the Taft administration, which was conducted along the same quiet, businesslike lines as the present administration, yet was bitterly criticized even by members of the party in power.

It is doubtful if Mr. Taft was more unfortunate in the selection of his cabinet or showed less tact in the handling of the tariff and the Ballinger affair than has Mr. Wilson in the Mexican embroglio. Certainly he never did anything equal to the fuss about the Caraboa incident, yet he was bitterly assailed from all sides for the very things that seem to have brought Mr. Wilson popularity.

Possibly Mr. Wilson might have been placed in a different light had he followed noisy, big-stick Teddy. Possibly Mr. Taft paved the way for the dignified Wilson administration. If he did create a desire for calm action in place of vacuous bellowing, he performed a noble service for his country.

Possibly the two most significant things about the Wilson administration are that all parties seem to have joined hands to make a successful administration possible and that the greatest progress in regulating the money power, trusts and corporations has been done without the show of big teeth or threats of big stick violence. The entire financial structure of the nation is undergoing a far-reaching reconstruction without the hint of a panic.

When the Wilson administration comes to an end there will be a record of accomplishment probably never before surpassed in the history of the nation. There will, of course, be many things for which Mr. Wilson and his administration may be criticized, many things which will be done differently from the way we would have done them, but we trust that those who may oppose him if a candidate for re-election, may be more fair than were those who assailed Taft, to the end that we may never again have such another disgraceful exhibition as that of the recent presidential election.

THE UDDER WAY.

One of the most practical moves ever started for the development of Lane County was initiated at Eugene Saturday when at an enthusiastic meeting of representative men from all parts of the County, the Lane County Dairymen's Association was organized and a committee appointed to arrange a method of financing a movement to purchase dairy cows in large consignments from the eastern markets, these to be sold to farmers and paid for out of the profits of the cows themselves.

This is not an original idea but is none the less a valuable one. It was advocated by The Sentinel over a year ago.

The Sentinel understands that no profit is to be made on the cows and that only a nominal interest will be charged on the money advanced.

Thousands of acres of grass annually goes to waste in Lane County. This waste fed to cows would flow from the udders of the bovines in a form that could be used to purchase thousands more of the milk-producing quadrupeds.

Lane County, with green grass practically all year around and with a climate requiring only the most fragile protection from the weather, is a field for dairy operations that opens the eyes of Eastern visitors and causes them to exclaim, "Such conditions would mean wealth almost untold back in our country."

Thousands of farmers are anxious to add to their dairy herds, but cannot themselves afford to ship in what few cattle they would need individually, or couldn't pay for them cash-in-advance even if they were at hand. With capital furnished to put cows on the farms that will pay for themselves with the profit on their own milk in a couple years, it is easy to believe that this move is a momentous undertaking for the development of the best county in the famous, fertile, fruitful Willamette.

J. W. Pixley of the Eugene Register, to whose energy and efforts this movement is due at this time, may find himself some day hailed as the father of the Lane County dairy industry.

The Forest Grove Press has found it necessary to add a linotype to its equipment to keep up the pace it has set for itself in the newspaper field.

Lebanon Criterion: Cottage Grove still dreams of the day when NeSmith county will be carved out of the surplus territory of Lane and Douglas counties and that city will blossom out as a full-fledged county seat. It is a worthy ambition and here is a hope that the next attempt is more successful than the last.

BRIEF NEWS OF OREGON

Portland has a population of about 243,327, according to figures presented by Commissioner Dieck.

The Oregon State Hardware Men's association met in Portland for a four days' session beginning Tuesday.

Dust Manos, a Greek, who killed Bill Karahalios, a fellow countryman, at Philomath, was arrested near Corvallis.

The milk and cream tests being conducted in various rural schools of Polk county have proven to be helpful to the dairy industry of the county.

Thomas B. Kay, state treasurer, has announced his candidacy for re-election, subject to the action of the republic party.

Five cars of Rogue River Valley potatoes were shipped to the United States army on the Mexican-Texas border. The price received was 75 cents a sack f. o. b. Medford.

Senator Chamberlain has introduced a bill in congress authorizing Multnomah county and Clarke county, Wash., to construct an interstate bridge across the Columbia river at Vancouver.

Senator Chamberlain has referred to the house committee various protests by salmon packers against Representative Lafferty's bill, requiring the date of the pack to be placed on the cans.

Farmers are finding good use for the oyster shells being dug out of the channel by the government dredger at work at Coos Bay. A large bed of the shells has been struck and the shells are excellent for a fertilizer.

In view of the protests by northwestern apple growers and shippers against the McKellar cold storage bill Congressman McKellar informed Representative Stannott that his bill was not intended to apply to fruit.

A law and order league, having for its object "the enforcement of all laws of city, county and state, and especially those pertaining to gambling and immorality," has been organized in Bend.

Logging operators in Coos county have their landings clear and 11,000,000 feet of logs have come out on the high water in the last few days. One jam of 3,000,000 feet occurred in the South Coos river, but they were released.

James E. Godfrey, of Salem, has been appointed income tax agent in the internal revenue service on recommendation of Collector Miller and Senators Chamberlain and Lane. His compensation will be $7 per day and $4 per day in lieu of subsistence.

With a declaration against it by Attorney-General Crawford, all members of the state desert land board, with the exception of Secretary of State Olcott, have gone on record against Governor West's plan of irrigating public lands by state and federal cooperation.

The good roads convention held at Independence declared for the Pacific Highway being built on the west side of the Willamette river, or for two highway, if necessary. It also went on record in favor of constructing permanent hard surface highways on all main traveled roads in Polk county to connect with the Pacific Highway on the north and south.

In John Lytle, under arrest in Grand Island, Neb., for criminal assault upon a young girl, which he has confessed, Detective Sergeants Day and Hyde, of the Portland police, believe that they have at last caught the murder of five-year-old Barbara Holzman and cleared up a mystery which has baffled the police since March, 1911.

With a capital stock of $641, the Corvallis Cannery, operated by the Benton County Growers' Association, did a $55,000 business in 1913. The cannery packed 17,840 cases of fruits and vegetables, this being 38 carloads of 36,000 pounds each. The cannery paid the growers approximately $16,000, minus 25 per cent retained as working capital for 1914. Besides this about $4000 was spent for additional room and equipment.

Russell Hawkins presented Jonathan Bourne, Jr., with a solid gold plate as a Christmas remembrance from citizens of Nehalem, Wheeler, Tillamook and Bay City, with an inscription testifying their "Lasting appreciation, respect and esteem and particularly in recognition of loyal, indefatigable, intelligent and effective effort in upbuilding the wonderful state of Oregon and welfare of the people."

Receiving reports that more boys in the state are smoking cigarettes than ever before, Superintendent of Public Instruction Churchill has announced that a campaign, having as its slogan "swat the deadly cigarette," would be started in the schools at once. So determined is Mr. Churchill to put an end to smoking by school boys he has announced that no smokers, no matter how excellent their handiwork, will be allowed to exhibit in the children's industrial fair department at the State Fair, and none will be eligible for competition for which the prizes will be free trips to the exposition at San Francisco.

Things We Think

Things others think, and what we think of the things others think.

Cupid doesn't waste much time loafing around marble halls.

You make a mistake if you figure that the boss can't get along without you—but you can make yourself so indispensable that he would hate to.

Folks who don't have enough to eat don't waste any money on dyspepsia tablets.

A father is supposed to make a man of his boy, but it frequently happens that the father becomes a man because of his boy.

When you say the truth isn't in a person you don't mean that you have got it out of him.

When the father sits in his chair after the little tots have gone to bed and gazes reflectively at the stubbed out toes of the shoes about the floor, it's pretty certain there are other things in his mind besides the price of a new pair of shoes.

The person who gracefully overlooks unintentional slights not only does a kindness to the guilty ones but saves himself a lot of unhappiness.

A lie, no matter how far down and out, can always come back.

A man's residence is the place where he boards his wife and children—his home is where he spends his time with them.

Nothing will satisfy some people and almost nothing seems to satisfy others.

The man who tries not to earn more than he is getting is usually getting more than he is earning.

We need more producers and not so many traducers.

Nine times out ten the wife isn't proud of the husband who obeys her every whim—and certainly he can't be proud of himself.

When a young lawyer goes courting his best girl it is a lucky thing for him that there is no one to interpose "incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial."

The things the express companies are thinking these days couldn't be sent under the parcel post regulations.

You never really know how much a man thinks of himself until he begins telling you why he should be elected to office—and he never realizes how little the people think of him until the votes are counted.

Anyway, the man who burns the midnight oil never figures in the news columns as a result of using kerosene to kindle the breakfast fire.

When you multiply the things the voter has to do to cast an intelligent ballot you divide the chances of his doing so.

Paved streets are pleasant to travel on but are not meant for young folks to be racing at all times of night.

The automobile is becoming a stable necessity.

The horse has its laugh when hauling a "dead" auto into town.

There is much talk about referring judicial procedure. It seems to us the procedure is alright if they would only proceed.

The name of the man who built the clumsy ark is known to every resident of a Christian land, but how many even heard the name of the man who designed the latest marvel in floating palaces that plows its way across the briny deep with the speed of an express train?
