SOCIETY

The young men's class of the Christian Church entertained the young women's class at a masked party Friday evening in the parlors of the church. Mrs. Price and Mr. Powell chaperoned the party. Games of all sorts were indulged in and supper was served. The masking created much merriment as many of the costumes were extremely laughable.

The Emanon Club met with Mrs. A. A. Richmond Thursday afternoon, only members of the club being present. The afternoon was spent in the usual manner over needlework.

Mrs. Ben Lureh entertained the Social Twelve Club at her home Thursday afternoon, at a most delightful meeting.

A number of the friends of Mrs. W. A. Cunningham gave her a shower Friday previous to her departure for Bladen, Neb.

Mrs. C. C. Cruson honored Mrs. Orville Spear with a luncheon Saturday to which were bidden the members of the M. P. G. Club of which both Mrs. Cruson and Mrs. Spear are members. The party was delightful in every respect and the luncheon was beautifully appointed.

The wedding of Miss Lucy Burgess and Mr. Charles Savage occurred Monday at the Harrington House in Roseburg. Rev. C. E. Short officiated. Mr. Savage is a well-to-do farmer living at Anchor, where the couple will make their home. Miss Burgess was formerly a teacher in the Cottage Grove schools. A wedding cake was sent from Indiana by the bride's mother.

The season of St. Valentine formed the motif in the decorations and spirit of the party at which Mrs. Jennie D. Fishburn entertained the Royal Neighbors Club at the home of her daughter, Mrs. B. S. Swengel, Tuesday afternoon. The tables were festooned in hearts of varying sizes and the place cards were hearts with cunning little cupids. The hostess served a luncheon of two courses consisting of fruit salad, cheese sandwiches, olives, branched peaches in whipped cream, cake and coffee. In addition to the twenty members of the club who were present Mrs. Fishburn invited in Mrs. N. E. Compton, Mrs. C. H. Burkholder, Mrs. Lydia Stouffer, Mrs. C. E. Umphrey, Mrs. S. L. Mackin and Mrs. H. N. Aldrich.

The newly organized five hundred club will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. B. S. Swengel to perfect their plans for the season.

The Vegetable Caterpillar.
New Zealand's vegetable caterpillar is not vegetable at all. It is a grub about the length of the finger which has its habitat in friable mold at the roots of the rata vine. In many instances this grub, known to New Zealand colonials by its Maori name, aweto, is infected by the spores of a fungus, Cordyceps (Sphaeria) robertsii. While the mycelium of this fungus is invading the tissues of the aweto it sends up a spore bearing stalk to the height of from four to eight inches just between the head and the first ring of the body of the grub. By the time the spores are ready to discharge the animal dies, and the whole body is found filled with vegetable material. The same spot of ground is the theater of a second drama of vegetable ferocity. While the fungus is destroying the insect at its roots the rata vine grows upward by twining about some tree of less rapid growth and in the end strangles its support and maintains thereafter a tree existence of its own.

Crooked Genius.
Once upon a time the city of London had to pay a county rate, but this was legally abolished many years ago. A certain attorney, who had at one time been connected with local taxation, hit upon the brilliant idea of levying this obsolete rate and turning the proceeds to his own use. He got the proper demand notes printed, distributed them in the usual fashion and the recipients paid up like lambs. The swindler had a regular office, a collector and all the usual accompaniments. It is said that he made over $15,000 a year, and no one ever thought of questioning the legality of the rate. If the crooked genius had been satisfied with a couple of years' profit and then quietly discontinued the collection of the rate the chances are that no one would ever have been any the wiser. But he was greedy and kept on year after year, until by chance a demand note fell into the hands of some one who knew.—Pearson's Weekly.

One Man Applauded.
Camille Saint-Saens was present when Verdi's "Hymn of All Nations" was rendered for the first time at the opening ceremonies of the world's fair in London, and he gave this reason for the "failure" of the composition: "The hymn was arranged to introduce the national anthem of the various countries, and not knowing that the 'Marseillaise' was at that time in bad repute, it was used as representative of France. The Emperor Napoleon when he heard the strains turned pale, and the knowing ones in the audience were so greatly embarrassed that no one in the great throng dared applaud. Yes, one man did applaud, and that was I. Napoleon arose in his box and directed his opera glass toward me, and I looked at him through my glass. After a few moments the emperor hurriedly departed."

Gave Him a Christian Name.
Even the polyglot Swiss interpreter at the general postoffice admits that there are languages which would stump him. How would he have solved the problem once presented at the Hampstead Green postoffice and recorded in Baines' "On the Track of the Mail Coach"? Two ladies wanted to send a money order to a foreign tradesman in Oxford street. "What Christian name?" inquired the clerk. "He is a Turk and has none." "We must have a Christian name," the clerk insisted. "But you can't. His bill merely says 'Kotzemollen.'" "Oh, very well," decided the clerk. "That will do. Cut his name in two and make the order payable to 'Kotze Mollen.'" Solomon could not have done better.—London Chronicle.

The Parson's Soft Job.
"There is a prevalent idea among the criminal classes that the clergy have nothing whatever to do." The authority for this statement is the archdeacon of London, who has three large prisons in his archdeaconry. An old woman once said to a jail chaplain: "I wish you could find a job for my old man. He is not up to much and cannot do anything, but he wants a soft job like yours!"—London Globe.
