MOTHERHOOD.

The following poem was written by Rabindranath Tagore, the Hindu poet, who has been awarded the latest Nobel prize for literature. The poem is called "The Beginning," and is from a collection entitled "The Crescent Moon":

"Where have I come from, where did you pick me up?" the baby asked its mother.

She answered, half-crying, half-laughing, and clasping the baby to her breast:

"You were hidden in my heart as its desire, my darling.

"You were in the dolls of my childhood's games; and when with clay I made the image of my god every morning, I made and unmade you then.

"You were enshrined with our household deity, in his worship I worshipped you.

"In all my hopes and my loves, in my life, in the life of my mother, you have lived.

"In the lap of the deathless spirit who rules our home you have been nursed for ages.

"When in girlhood my heart was opening its petals, you hovered as a fragrance about it.

"Your tender softness bloomed in my youthful limbs, like a glow in the sky before the sunrise.

"Heaven's first darling, twin-born with the morning light, you have floated down the stream of the world's life, and at last you have stranded on my heart.

"As I gaze on your face, mystery overwhelms me; you who belong to all have become mine.

"For fear of losing you I hold you tight to my breast. What magic has snared the world's treasure in these slender arms of mine?"

It's quite a problem to keep the registration up to the number of candidates.

CHARITY vs GREED.

Civilized people as a rule are easily touched by stories of those who have been unfortunate or are victims of circumstances—and are as easily "touched" for the relief of the downtrodden.

All of this is very proper—and makes a pretty picture for those with a gift at mental painting, but the beauty of it all is too often spoiled by those as oversupplied with greed as they are entirely deficient in pride.

The writer has several instances in mind.

A few years ago a cyclone destroyed considerable property in a certain section of the middle West. A relief fund was raised almost spontaneously and was distributed according to the needs of the sufferers. The sacrifices made by many in swelling the fund were touching. They were a beautiful exemplification of the charity of man toward his fellow creature. In the distribution of the fund many really in need of aid refused it, but the beauty of the whole picture was spoiled by the greediness of sufferers who were in no wise in need of aid. A striking example was a farmer who demanded to be recompensed in the amount of $200 for damage to buildings, and yet the distributing committee found that he owned free of encumbrance, a farm worth probably $10,000, while many of those who had given freely to the fund did not have worldly goods to the amount of damages demanded by this greedy one.

To come closer to home: Oregon has a widows' pension law. It is a worthy law and a tribute to the generosity of human nature. Yet in the public press we read almost daily of pensions being refused applicants who upon investigation have been found perfectly able and capable of caring for themselves. The other day a pension already granted was taken away from a woman who was found to be paying taxes upon $50,000 worth of property. The pension money she did receive was some of it paid by those who had to scrimp on the necessities of life to be able to meet their taxes. Surely the oft repeated accusation that riches make people proud does not hold good in this case.

It is the greed of such as we have mentioned that makes hard the lot of those really in need of aid. Even those who can afford it dislike being stung, and the fear that it might go to an unworthy cause has kept many millions of dollars where they are doing no good that might otherwise be relieving want and suffering. The wonder is that we give as freely as we do when we have been stung so often as we have.

THE COST OF POOR ROADS.

The whole country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf to the Canadian boundary has for some time been cussing poor roads and discussing the cost of good ones. The subject is of no more vital interest to any section of the country than to Oregon. Almost every conceivable argument has been put forth here to show the value of macadam highways in the home of the Oregon mist, but we have seen no more telling argument than that of Col. W. G. D. Mercer, who looks at it from the reverse side, the cost of poor roads. His unique manner of argument is so simple that we wonder why all of us have not thought of it before. Possibly the Colonel might not have rushed into print with his idea had he not been a candidate for County Judge. Here is the way he puts it:

"Let it be supposed that two farmers living in different localities, but at equal distance from the Eugene market, learn by telephone that the hay market has advanced $1 per ton. The farmer living on a bad road—as 75 per cent of them do—can immediately haul one ton (maybe), while the other farmer can easily haul three tons because he lives on a good road. The rise in the price means a profit of $3 to the one man and only $1 to his neighbor. That this condition often arises may be witnessed many times in Eugene."

Things We Think

Things others think, and what we think of the things others think.

An improvement on trial marriages would be to try to be happy even if a mistake has been made.

If mothers and fathers only knew as much as they think their children do, there would be a whole lot of highly educated people in this old world.

Probably one reason children are not punished more than they are is because parents are reminded by their own children of the things they did when of like age.

If no time were wasted it wouldn't be necessary to work more than about half as many hours as we do.

The girl who fails to take advantage of the leap year may be just as sorry as the one who did.

The real good roads problem—sticking to the straight and narrow path.

A daughter can never fully appreciate her mother until she raises a daughter of her own.

Some folks waste enough energy defending some proposition that everybody believes in to make considerable headway with some proposition that has not yet become popular.

I. W. W. probably stands for "Itinerant Weary Willies."

If we had to wait until people were fitted to govern themselves we would never have self government.

No matter how efficient a machine of any kind may be, it does its best work only with efficient human supervision.

It is quite possible to lead impure lives under the most sanitary conditions.

The man who kicks the most about how the government is run, is the one who does the least to improve conditions.

It's remarkable what a considerable quantity of common people are getting to be with the trusts, corporations and combinations, now submitting without protest to the laws of the land.

Once in a while these commission forms of government seem to forget who commissioned them.

There is a stock fish that is gilled by nature, as well as the sucker who buys watered stock.

Easter is an appropriate day for some of the dead ones to come to life and there are 364 other days in the year upon which this advice applies with equal force.

A lot of people make a good impression by keeping out of sight.

A man with two wives is kept about as busy as a mule defending itself against two hornets, both advancing upon the armored end of the animal from different directions.

When a person gets what he wants, he's dissatisfied that he didn't wish for more.

One of the things we enjoy the most and don't know when we are getting it, is refreshing sleep.

We are all firmly convinced that we want our rights, even if we have to bruise some other fellow's corns to get them.

The woman who is taking her fourteenth husband ought to know whether all men are alike or not.

It's easy to smile through our troubles when we can find someone who's a little worse off than we are.

Ambition is a good thing if it doesn't make the ambitious one think he is too good to fritter away his time on the lowly and smaller things that are the stepping stones to higher and bigger things.

About the only way a woman can avoid being accused of gossiping is to be deaf and dumb.

A good rule to follow is: Don't give good advice unless it is based upon the results of your own efforts.

There is generally believed to be some considerable difference in the definition of "man" and "gentleman," but no one is worthy of either title unless he can qualify under both.

Every woman thinks she's got the best man on earth. We would like to know what her opinion must be (founded upon experience) of the mere average man.

Collecting money by law costs too much, but even at that sometimes it is worth it.

Many things are never done that are often tried, but nothing is ever done that is never tried.

There is only one fair and equitable tax law. That is one under which the other fellow pays all the taxes.

When people reach that happy condition under which all righteous laws are obeyed, such laws will be superfluous—unnecessary.

There is now more fear for the fellow who burns too much gasoline than for one who burns too much midnight oil.

A Chicago man advocates longer school hours and no summer vacation. Get that grouch out of your system and remember you were a boy once yourself.

McMURPHEY IS CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY JUDGE

Seeks Nomination at Hands of Republican Party

ECONOMICAL ADMINISTRATION OF COUNTY AFFAIRS AND IMPROVEMENT OF PUBLIC HIGHWAYS PROMISED.

R. McMurphey, councilman from the second ward in Eugene, has announced his intentions to become a candidate on the Republican ticket for the position of Lane County Judge. Mr. McMurphey has lived in Eugene many years and is widely known throughout the county.

He has held responsible positions as a member of the Eugene school board, first vice-president and second vice-president of the Eugene Commercial Club and as chairman of the street committee of the Eugene city council has done much to obtain good highways within the city. He has made himself famous in his home town on account of the cleanly condition of the streets and alleys. The State Dairy and Food Commissioner, after an inspection of the city a short time ago, remarked that the streets and alleys in Eugene were cleaner than those of any other town in the state.

In speaking of his candidacy while in Cottage Grove Wednesday, Mr. McMurphey said:

"If elected to the office I shall use my utmost endeavor to promote an economical administration of the county's affairs as is consistent with efficiency. I am familiar with road and other conditions all over the county: from Florence to Foley and Belknap, from the northern boundary of the county to London and the Bohemia mining district, where I am considerably interested. I am heartily in favor of the improvement of the roads, as nothing will advance the interests of the agricultural communities as much as good highways." Adv. alc

 The Fairies Cook Book
Is a compendium of the finest recipes for Baking and Cooking in this Climate

Climatic conditions are very important in cooking and baking; what applies to the high altitude of the East is not adaptable to the sea level of this section. That is why successful Eastern formulae are often failures here. The Fairies Cook Book, just issued by the Fisher Flouring Mills Company, manufacturers of the perfect All-Purpose Flour, made of choicest Eastern hard wheat and choicest Western soft wheat, was prepared with this fact in mind. Mrs. Isabella Swezy, recognized authority on the art of cookery, prepared and tested every one of its 156 recipes. For successful baking in this climate the Fairies Cook Book has no equal. We will mail you the book if you fill out and send us coupon below, together with Ten Cents (cash or stamps).
