FADS AND FANCIES.
By Harriette.
The ribbons that are now being shown are wonderful in their variety, and in the colors and designs in which they are offered. Dresden ribbons are always dainty and to be desired, and the Roman stripe ribbons are enjoying unusual popularity. Ribbons made of ratine in wide widths are effective for hat sashes and girdles, and pongee ribbons in beautiful colors and artistic and original designs are also shown for like purposes.

White kid belts are being heralded as "the thing" for wear with the summer frocks. These belts are made in tailored style, with a bow in front and snap fasteners. They come in various widths and are the last word in belts for summer wear.

Pretty collars for wear over the suit jacket or with separate plain blouses are made of crepe de chine in dainty colors with frilled or lace edges.

Mothers will be dismayed to learn that New York society women are dressing the little society beaux in Lord Fauntleroy suits with starched and frilled great collars. The little rompers and simple suits that have been the style for children for several years were common sense and comfortable and it is hoped that the revival of the Lord Fauntleroy costume will be short lived and will not extend to the mothers of little men all over the land.

The new skirts all show ruffles or puffs with generous flares in one or more places.

Very clever and dainty little house dresses that are particularly lovely for summer wear are very much worn by a number of young college girls when attending to their duties in their rooms. They will be found to be equally as desirable for the young woman or housewife who wishes to be becomingly and prettily clad when about her own home duties. They are made up in any suitable material, the college girls showing a decided preference for lawns and dimities in dainty designs. They are cut of one long piece of the material, just twice the length of the prospective wearer, are rounded out in the neck and edged with lace or embroidery made with little kimono sleeves, and slightly above the waist line a piece of heading or gusset for elastic is run and a ribbon or elastic run in to draw the loose garment about the figure. When the little dress is laundered the ribbon may be taken out and the dress ironed as if it were a large sized pillow case—or something equally flat.

The tailored suits for spring are very charming when made of silk or crepe and the extreme carelessness of cut, fit, etc., and the absence of severely tailored features render the making of a chic spring suit a very easy matter for the clever home dressmaker.

A serving tray is no longer an ordinary thing of nickel or brass or silver—depending upon your worldly wealth—but may be quite the most artistic thing imaginable, as well as enticingly inexpensive. If you have an old sampler that belonged to your grandmother, or a bit of Japanese or Chinese embroidery, or tapestry, or even a pretty piece of chintz, have it framed artistically, with handles on two sides of the frame and you will find yourself the possessor of one of the most fashionable and pretty trays imaginable. Such trays have more character than even the most magnificent silver trays and can be made to harmonize charmingly with the color scheme or decorations of the dining room.

To open a book correctly, first hold the book on the table with the opening side up; open the front cover, then the back, pressing them down to the table; then take a few of the front leaves and press them down, then a few of the back leaves and press them down and so on until the middle of the book is reached. If all books were first opened in this way they would not be found breaking loose from the backs and even losing their covers altogether.

A very practical way of making runners for lingerie is to simply crochet a heavy chain, run it into the garment which it is to serve in and crochet a little ball at either end. These runners withstand any amount of washing as no ribbon ever could and are quite as dainty.

MILITIAMEN FEAST; MAKE MERRY AND ORATE

In feast and merry making and with patriotic speeches the Sixth Company, Coast Artillery Reserve, observed the seventh anniversary of its organization Thursday evening. Besides the members of the company, many G. A. R. members, regimental officers and civilian friends, also sat down at the banquet board.

Forty-five members of the company were present in full dress uniform. After the banquet, Captain Johnson, as toastmaster, reviewed the history of the company, called the roll of the company since its inception and called upon members and guests for responses. Comrades D. L. Woods and Robert Griffin of the G. A. R. stirred a vibrant note in the hearts of all present with their patriotic reminiscences and their unflinching loyalty. Col. Hammond of Eugene responded to the toast "How to Get an Armory," and Capt. Collins to "Our Artillery," each receiving prolonged applause. J. S. Medley made a stirring speech voicing the admiration felt by the civilian for the flag and the men who guard it.

Out of town guests were Col. Creed Hammond, Major Frank Willoughby, Captain William White, Captain Paul G. Bond, Col. Geo. O. Voran, all of Eugene and Captain R. W. Collins of the U. S. Regulars, Inspector-Instructor of the Coast Artillery Reserve of Oregon.

OBITUARY.
On April 29, 1914, Mrs. Agnes Marshall Davidson, aged 82, passed peacefully away at her home on East Main Street.

She was a native of Fifeshire, Scotland. Her father dying when she was quite young, she moved with her mother and uncle to Ontario, Canada, where a pioneer home was made. Later she met and married Gavin Davidson. Some years after she moved with her family to Tennessee and thence to Oregon, remaining in the vicinity of Cottage Grove for nineteen years. Her husband, three daughters and three grandchildren survive her. The daughters are: Mrs. Thos. Richardson and Mrs. Eugene Miller, both of Silk Creek, and Miss Janet Davidson, at home.

She was a kind helpmate to her husband and a kind and loving mother, also a life member of the Presbyterian church, but when the church of her choice was not at hand and any kindred near, she always attended with her family on the Lord's days, which she tried to keep sacred. She did her duty as she saw it. In sickness and distress, as long as she was able, she was ready to help.

About six years ago she became an invalid, having fallen and received injuries from which she never recovered. She bore all with Christian patience until her time came for which she was fully prepared through the merits of her Savior alone—Rom. 8—24 and 25. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. Broadbooks of the Presbyterian church and interment was made in the Odd Fellows cemetery. may6p be desired by the Grovers, as is shown by the frequency with which the clouds came. Not a single man walked on either side, Cottage Grove being too eager to break down the new fence around the ball yard, to wait for wide ones, and Coburg swatsmen were too amazed at the manner in which Medley grooved them over to be able to gather in the required four to receive transportation to the initial snack.

R. Mulligan, who held down first for the visitors, suffered a split finger in the fourth frame and gave way to Whitaker. The injury was not of a serious nature and no medical attention was necessary.

How it happened:

Coburg opened the game by sacrificing the lives of three men via the strike out route, Medley throwing but 13 balls in exterminating the three batsmen. Cottage Grove—Smith pushed one to McPherson who relayed it to first in time to head the runner off. Cellars hooked one for three stations, Earl hit to short, which Drury tried to kick, Cellars crossing the pan and Earl taking a stop-over at first, Earl stole, Wilhelm singled, scoring Earl, Atkinson singled, McCaragar struck out. Brumbaugh hit to the box and perished at first.

In the second McKibben led off with a single, Meats followed suit, Peterson struck out, Gambell singled, scoring McPherson, Meats tried to cross the plate on the play and was thrown out by Smith to Earl, R. Mulligan hit to McCaragar, ending the frame. Cottage Grove—Damewood pulled a two-bagger, Medley was beamed and took first for revenge, Damewood out stealing, Smith singled, scoring the artilleryman, Cellars hit for a couple sacks, Earl connected for three bases, scoring Smith and Cellars, Wilhelm got a life, Atkinson died at first, Wilhelm out stealing third, McPherson to Peterson.

In the third Coburg went out one, two, three. Cottage Grove—McCaragar fanned, Brum, singled, Damewood got his second double, Medley got a life, Brum, counting, Smith reached first on an error as did Cellars, Medley scoring, Earl flew to Peterson, Wilhelm struck out.

In the fourth Coburg got two hits but could not count. Cottage Grove—Atkinson met one square on the nose which cleared the left field fence by six feet (a nasty trick was pulled on Bob at this point of play. He was not aware that the ball had cleared the fence and reposed in the creek beyond, and on the marathon which he was now doing, he was madly urged on by both players and fans until he was about all in when he faced across the pan), McCaragar added his third strike out, Brum, doubled, Damewood hit to McPherson, Medley hit to Drury, who cut him off at first.

After this line of bombardment both sides settled down and apparently all were happy and no great damage was done on either side.

In the sixth Atkinson singled and like a duck taking to water, started to go to second, Whitaker then produced the pill, stepped over and tagged Bob, who had been the victim of the hidden ball trick. S h h h h h h!
