AGENTS

The Most Reliable PEOPLE

It is a recognized fact in the business world that the most reliable people are those who own their own homes. They are the ones who can be depended upon—they are the backbone of the Nation. If it is credit at a store, the merchant has more confidence in the man who owns his own home than in the renter who can pack up and pull out at a moment's notice. If it is a loan, the man who has shown habits of industry and thrift, as exemplified in the ownership of his own home, is the man who is given preference. He is the man who is considered a good risk for a non-collateral loan.

"Oh, he's back scorching up the Tenderloin, as usual. But you'll have to cut him out or I'll leave you here. That's final, understand?"

"I intend to stay here anyhow."

"Hub?" The old man turned with a start. "I'm dashed if you do!" Then savagely: "What do you suppose I came down here for? I'm lonesome. I want you to come home."

Kirk smiled craftily and looked at Runnels. "Well, what can you offer? I'm doing pretty well as it is, and I can't afford to lay off."

His father, in turn, appealed to the acting superintendent. "See! It's nothing less than blackmail. Is he any good, Mr. Runnels?"

"If there weren't so much politics in this job he'd be master of transportation of the P. R. R. That's doing pretty well, isn't it? We're both going to quit and look for new work."

"Do you drink, Kirk?"

"I haven't even had an alcohol rub since I left New York. But, dad, if you place me you'll have to take care of Runnels too. He knows more about railroads than you do."

Mr. Anthony grunted a trifle skeptically at this and murmured: "He must be a bright young man. I suppose what he doesn't know you do. Well, how would you both like to come north and give me some lessons?"

"Do you mean it?" they cried in chorus.

"I do."

"Oh, there's Allan too. He'll have to go."

He Paused and Let His Hostile Eyes Rest Upon Gertrudis.

"Any cats and dogs you'd like to have drawing salary from me? Now, let's go somewhere and eat. I haven't tasted anything to speak of since Clifford's message came."

"If you don't mind, I—I'd like to stop at the Garavels' for a minute," Kirk said longingly, and his father scowled. "I'd forgotten this—wife of yours."

"She's not there," Runnels hastened to say. "I've tried to find her, but I was told she was out at the country place."

"Then I think I'd rather drive out there than eat. Won't you go with me, dad?"

"Well—yes! I want to see this banker fellow, and—I'm not so blanked hungry, after all. We'll settle this thing right now."

The afternoon sun was still an hour high when Kirk Anthony came down the hill from the Garavels' home and crossed the meadow toward the forest glade he knew so well.

Chiquita was there, huddled upon the seat where they had rested together, one foot curled beneath her like a child, her head bowed down disconsolately. From one brown hand, now drooping listlessly, a few wild flowers had scattered, and her slim figure was clad once more in the stiff, coarse denim dress of blue. Her other hand was toying with her beads mechanically, as if the fingers had learned their task from long practice. Her dusky eyes were fast upon the lights that wavered in the pool.

As if to prove that the spot was really peopled by kind spirits, a gentle voice seemed to whisper the news to her and she turned to find him smiling at her. She rose and met him with her hands outstretched, her face transfigured.

After a time she leaned backward in his arms and said gravely: "You see! When one says many, many prayers the good saints always answer. The padre told me that I should never cease until you came, but I grew very tired, senior."

"And you never doubted me?"

"Oh, no!"

"I'm free, you know."

"Of course! What else were my prayers for? Had my father allowed I would have gone to your prison, but he forbade it, so I had no choice. But every hour I prayed that he might give me leave, and I think his heart was yielding."

"I'm sure of that," he told her. "for I have just come from him."

It was some time later when the sun was dipping that voices sounded outside the wall of verdure, and Kirk heard Andres Garavel saying:

"Of a certainty I shall try that experiment, senior, for the ticks in this country are a pest to cattle. A little to the right and you will find the path. So?"

An instant later the two white haired men appeared.

"Hello! There you are, eh?" Darwin K. Anthony exclaimed gruffly. "Where's that girl?" He paused and let his hostile eyes rest upon Gertrudis.

She saw a great, forbidding giant of a man scowling down at her with eyes like Kirk's, and she came forward timidly, holding out her hands. She was smiling up at him faintly.

"You are Keerk's father, yes? You are the Senior Antonio?"

Mr. Anthony uttered a curious, choking exclamation and gathered her gently in his arms. When he looked up his eyes were wet and his deep lined face was working.

"I couldn't wait any longer," he apologized humbly to his son. "I had to come and see her."

"And then I hope you will like me," she said in her grave, quiet way.

"Your father has told me everything"—Garavel laid a hand upon his new son's shoulder—"and we have become good friends already. I fear I owe you a great apology, my boy. But if I consent that you take my little girl away to your country will that be reparation?"

"Then you will let her go with us?" Kirk cried happily.

"If she doesn't go I'll stay," Anthony senior rumbled. "I—I don't see how you ever did it, you're such a blamed fool. Now let's go back to the house, it's sundown."

"We'll be along directly," his son assented.

"There are chills in the evening air," Mr. Garavel protested.

"I'm sorry, but we were waiting for the fairies. They were almost in sight when you frightened them away."

Gertrudis nodded. "It is quite true, Senior Antonio. We heard them all about, everywhere." She placed her little hand in Kirk's, then checked her father's remonstrance, saying:

"Oh, it is quite proper for us to walk home together, even in the dark. We are married now, you know."

"Come on, Garavel," exclaimed Darwin K. Anthony. "You understand how it is." Together they went out through the fragrant path a little way. Then old man Anthony paused and called back to his son wistfully. "But I say, Kirk, don't stay too long; we're lonesome."

THE END.

TRIBUTE PAID TO DEAD

Bodies of Sailors Killed in Mexico Reach America.

New York.—Nation and city paid tribute in silence Sunday to the 17 men who gave their lives in the occupation of Vera Cruz. Bearing the bodies of the bluejackets and marines, the armored cruiser Montana, escorted by the presidential yacht Mayflower, having aboard the secretary of the navy, reached port early Sunday morning and conveyed by the superdreadnought Wyoming, steamed up the harbor shortly before noon.

The bodies were brought ashore shortly before 8 o'clock Monday morning and placed on caissons for the procession up Broadway to City Hall for a brief ceremony there and on across the Manhattan bridge to the navy yard for the services. President Wilson reached the city from Washington at 7:15 Monday and delivered the memorial address at the navy yard.

Fox Fire.

Fox fire generally appears on a white oak stump which has decayed from within, so that the whole interior glows like a crucible. At times it seems to vibrate and change like the northern lights on a small scale, but it is difficult to be sure of this.—"A Farmer's Notebook."

Two of a Kind.

"Oh, George," sighed the lovesick maiden, "I'm sure I'm not worthy to be your wife."

"Well," replied George wearily, "I'm not worthy to be your husband, so we're just about evenly matched."—Philadelphia Press.

NEWS FROM OUR NATIONAL CAPITAL

House Facing Record Vote on the Proposed Prohibition Amendment.

Washington.—With the Panama canal tolls exemption debate running strong in the senate and the house facing a record vote on the proposed constitutional amendment for nationwide prohibition, congress promises to have a busy week.

Interest in the house centers in Mexican developments. Representatives generally, including some administration sponsors, would not be surprised if the week would be marked by some decisive move by the administration.

Congress is prepared for any war emergency. Lying on Speaker Clark's desk is a resolution from the military affairs committee, the passage of which would make immediately available the two hundred million dollars of the annual army appropriation bill. The appropriations committee is holding back its big general deficiency bill on a possibility of a call for emergency war appropriation.

All kinds of rumors about the prospects for action on the prohibition resolution are flying about the capitol. Some of the pro-prohibition members assert they will fight to win, with the sentiment of the country back of them; and that they believe they will command a large vote in the house. Members opposed to the resolution declare that it could win on a majority vote, but that it could not possibly muster two-thirds of the house, necessary for passage of a constitutional amendment.

Secretary Lane Cuts Red Tape.

Making good his promise to lend every proper aid to the man who is endeavoring honestly to acquire title to a home on the public domain, Secretary Lane, of the interior department, is cutting out red tape in his own office and in the general land office and doing away with technical protests against the issuance of patents.

As a result of his reforms, the secretary, between July 1, 1913, and April 25, 1914, approved 40,125 entries for patent, being an increase of 4370 over the number of entries approved in the corresponding period of the previous year. This increase is shown in face of the fact that the number of filings made is gradually diminishing.

Suffrage Cohorts Present Petition.

Several thousand women from practically every state in the union paraded Saturday along Pennsylvania avenue from the white house to the capitol, and presenting to members of congress petitions adopted at meetings all over the country a week ago.

The scene after the parade reached the east steps of the capitol was impressive. Massing themselves on the plaza steps, and with several bands and a chorus of 100 girls at the entrance to the building, the enthusiastic paraders sang "The March of the Women," by Dr. Ethel Emyth, of England.

The bands then struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the 531 petition-bearers filed up the steps into the rotunda of the capitol, where a special committee of congress received them. In the line were Senators La Follette, Thomas, Thompson, Owen, Bristow, Poindexter and Brady, and Representatives Madden, Sabath, Falconer, Stone, Knowland, Raker, Moss, of West Virginia; Roberts, of Nevada; Helvering, Keating and Bryan, who shook hands with each of their callers.

National Capital Brevities.

Surveys preliminary to the construction of the government railway in Alaska are to be made immediately.

The senate and house have agreed on the plan of having President Wilson issue a proclamation designating the second Sunday in May of each year as national Mother's day.

Senator La Follette told the senate that there was a conspiracy to coerce the interstate commerce commission in favor of the proposed increase of 5 per cent in freight rates by eastern railroads.

At the opening of the next session of congress members will have their votes recorded by an electrical device. The house will be asked to appropriate $20,000 for the installation of the machinery intended to save time in recording the votes.

A brisk fight against the ratification of the proposed treaty between the United States and Colombia is expected in the senate. The minority is opposed to the measure, which would provide for payment of $25,000,000 indemnity in connection with the partition of Panama.

The "little navy" men made their final stand against two battleships on a motion to send the bill back to the committee, which was defeated, 201 to 106. Democratic Leader Mann, and other prominent figures in the house, supported the motion.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sent for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, Ohio.
