THE MAKING AND FEEDING OF SILAGE

Silage during the last three decades has come into general use throughout the United States, especially in those regions where the dairy industry has reached its greatest development. Silage is universally recognized as a good and cheap feed for farm stock, and particularly so for cattle and sheep. These are observations made in farmers' bulletin No. 57 of the United States department of agriculture.

Silage is the best and cheapest form in which a succulent feed can be provided for winter use. An acre of grain can be placed in the silo at a cost not exceeding that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding. Crops can be put in the silo during weather that cannot be used in making hay or curing fodder, which is an important consideration in some localities.

A given amount of corn in the form of silage will produce more milk than the same amount when shocked and dried. There is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder. Good silage properly fed is all consumed and in addition very palatable. Like other succulent feeds, it has a beneficial effect upon the digestive organs, and more stock can be kept on a given area of land when it is the basis of the ration.

On account of the smaller cost for labor silage can be used for supplementing pastures more economically.

The American Guernsey Cattle club finds that during the past year thirteen cows have exceeded 75 pounds of butter fat for the year. One hundred and six cows have given a milk yield of over 11,000 pounds of milk in the year. Several have given 12,000, 14,000 and 15,000 pounds. Such creditably authenticated records as these fully show that the Guernsey cow is not only a good butter producer, but is able to give a good amount of milk. The Guernsey pure bred and grades supply the highest class milk trade.

There is no question but what the color and flavor, as well as the richness so characteristic of her products, are fast winning high place in the dairy market. The bull shown is a Guernsey of pure blood and a prize winner.

FARM INSTITUTE PRIZE BOON. ton, brings him trade and extra money. The judging of these eggs should be public and instructive. Though eggs are common not everybody can judge, and most of the judging is simply done by weight, with no examination of contents.

There are times when eggs are so close that six dozen in a bunch may be about all alike, but an examination of their contents may show a difference, and an egg judge should know an egg inside and out and the rating of the different qualities so that an equitable award may be made.

The best score card for eggs we have so far seen was used at Cornell (N. Y.) State College of Agriculture at the last Farmers' week, and we hereby furnish it to those desirous for information on the subject:

MARKET EGG SCORE CARD. Disqualifications: Unmistakable signs of faking. An egg unfit for eating purposes. If any egg is disqualified the whole entry shall be discarded.

Valuation size: Should be large and uniform..... 20 Shape: Should be uniform..... 10 Color: Must be uniformly pure white or brown..... 15 Shell: Must be unwashed, but clean; smooth, strong, free from cracks. Its texture should be uniform..... 10 Interior quality (by candling): The air space should be small, and the inner shell membrane near the air space should be firm. The contents should be translucent, with the yolk showing but slightly..... 50 An entry shall consist of one dozen eggs.

DON'TS. Don't hold a grudge. A little bitterness, like gall, can kill much sweet and spoil a whole life. Hate hung Haman.

Don't expect to raise many of your chicks if you keep them on rank ground. Their runs should be clean and green.

Don't abuse the broodles. The hen that hatches and broods a bunch of chicks gets a natural rest and lays better for it.

Don't let the lice get your chicks. They kill and stunt much young stock that house killer will save.

Don't put off a task because it's disagreeable. If a hen is sick treat her quick.

Don't minimize your mistakes and magnify another's.

Don't forget that inbreeding results in decreased vigor and size.

Don't expect stock penned on bare, dirty runs to breed healthy offspring.

Don't start that incubator without a thorough inspection. Mice often build nests in them, and a mouse nest in a hen won't do.

Clipping Horses. The condition of a horse's skin plays a very important part in the health of the animal, for a great amount of waste matter is expelled through the skin. During the warm days of spring a horse with a heavy coat of hair will perspire with slight exercise or even when standing in a barn. The hair becomes gummed or matted and often causes the glands in the skin to become closed and in time results in skin and other diseases. Taking it all in all, the benefit of clipping horses cannot be overrated.

PAPA MUST KEEP SWEET.

Once more the cook stove must be moved. The carpet must be beat. And, though he gets bang full of dust, Yes, papa must keep sweet.

The furniture must go upstairs. The carpet must be beat. And, though he gets bang full of dust, Yes, papa must keep sweet.

The piano must be changed round. And, though it smashes his feet, Why, papa mustn't say a word— Yes, papa must keep sweet.

The house must be turned upside down. And not a bite to eat. And, though he is most starved to death, Yes, papa must keep sweet.

But mother she may grow all day And sass the band to beat, But papa mustn't say a word— Yes, papa must keep sweet.

EGG SHOWS.

Egg shows are now a part of the exhibits at many county fairs, poultry exhibitions, farmers' club competitions and farmers' institutes.

These are an excellent feature. They encourage egg farmers to produce eggs of quality and induce many to enter the ranks of winter egg producers to compete. To win the prize for the best eggs entered is a fine advertisement for a man's stock, and such an award, printed in the local papers and on a breeder's letter head and egg card.
