Tiny Little Ad. Will Do More than a Man's Work

If you have real estate to sell, you have a business proposition to make to a more or less limited number of people—to those who need just such property as you offer, or who would buy it as an investment if the inducement were strong enough.

If you could hire a canvasser who KNEW WHERE TO FIND EVERY ONE OF THESE POSSIBLE BUYERS OF YOUR PROPERTY, and who could call on them in your interest, you would be willing to pay that man a pretty high price for his services.

But no such man is to be found. For no such information is available to any one.

Yet, you can secure this highly desirable result through the use of The Sentinel's classified ads. For every man or woman in the city who is thinking of buying real estate is a reader of the classified advertisements.

And this applies to all other classifications of advertisements. The people with whom it would be possible for you to do business ARE SURE TO READ YOUR CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENT—for it is in line with their personal interests to do so.

The cost is almost nothing—only one cent a word, with special discounts after five insertions.

A Paint Story

A CERTAIN well known man residing in the city of Cottage Grove came into our shop the other day and said: "I can buy guaranteed Pure Paint in Portland for $1.45 per gallon. My neighbor has used some of this paint and it looks pretty good." Now our friend was the "Show Me" kind although not from Missouri, and had a gallon of his neighbors' paint weighed. The $1.45 guaranteed Pure Paint weighed 13 1/2 pounds. We weighed a gallon of Sherwin-Williams paint in the same color, in this man's presence and it tipped the beam at 18 pounds exactly.

It is needless to say we took this man's order, and he said he saw at least one reason for the difference in price.
