Mr. Redford criticizes The Sentinel for saying anything about the accident. The Sentinel cares nothing for such criticism. It is the duty of a newspaper to print such news and all automobile accidents which come to the attention of The Sentinel will be duly reported without fear or favor and threats of bodily injury or libel suits will at no time influence the paper in the publication of the news as it occurs from week to week.

Mr. Redford's detailed account is as follows: "I noticed the woman and little girl, honked for the crossing fully 50 feet before I turned and slowed the machine down to twomiles an hour."

Mr. Redford states that if he had not honked for the crossing the accident would have occurred, but that when he sounded the warning it caused Mrs. Quillen to stop and turn back for the little girl. If she had not done this he thinks she would have passed by and not known that the machine had passed. He continued: "The woman was excited and seemed to partially stumble over the little girl and then sat down on the sidewalk. I halted to inquire if she was hurt, got no reply and passed on to the house of my sister a block away. I had no idea that anyone was injured until Mr. Landess called me back to take her home, which I readily did. The machine did not come within eight feet of the woman and I drove off of the graded part of the road, nearly upsetting the car in an attempt not to hit her."

Mr. Redford emphatically states that he, instead of the boy, was driving the car at the time of the accident and further states that the physician who attended the case says the injury is a mild one. Mr. Redford also states that Mr. Landess tells a falsehood if he says that he saw the accident. (The Sentinel has certainly made no more reckless statement than this one by Mr. Redford. It is certain beyond the chance of a doubt that Mr. Landess and probably a dozen others saw the accident from the Landess porch.)

Despite Mr. Redford's statement that every word of the entire story was a falsehood, there seems but two points that can be questioned: Those are whether the machine actually struck Mrs. Quillen and as to who was driving.

The reporter who handled the story makes the explanation that the impression was general that the machine struck the injured woman, that the husband of the injured woman gave the same impression and that the injury was so serious that under the conditions there did not seem any reason to question that the machine had hit her. This is the only mistake in which it seems that the reporter's attempt to get an accurate story can be criticized.

Mrs. Quillen states that she noticed the machine coming along at a pretty good pace, that she had no idea that it was going to turn for the crossing and had no warning until it was almost onto her, when she turned, grabbed the little girl and pulled her around in front of her. She knows that she fell, but is not certain how it happened. She is not able to state positively whether she was hit by the machine or not. It is understood that on the night of the accident she said she did not believe the machine hit her. Mr. Quillen says he does not see how his wife could have been so seriously injured unless the machine did strike her.

Wm. Landess, his daughter Jennie and several others saw the accident, saw the woman fall, but do not know whether the machine hit her. They rather believe that it did not, but that it was a very narrow escape. They say that the machine came up to the crossing at a pretty good speed and that after it had passed they rushed out and found the woman sitting where she had fallen and unable to get up. Mr. Landess then called for the machine to come back and take her home. While the point seems immaterial to The Sentinel, all those who witnessed the accident from the Landess porch are willing to make oath that the boy was driving the machine, both when the accident occurred and when it returned to take the injured woman home. Those in the car say Mr. Redford was driving. The Sentinel will not attempt to decide the point.

Dr. Kime says that the sprain is a very serious one, that a ligament is torn and that it may be a month before the injured member can be used. He says the injury could easily have been inflicted with out the machine having struck the woman and that it is his opinion that it was probably done by her stepping on one of the sloping planks in the crosswalk.

To show the honesty of its intentions The Sentinel offered to print any testimony Mr. Redford would submit from anyone who could have known anything of the accident. He said he would furnish several affidavits, but has not done so as yet. The Sentinel will print them when they are submitted.

[Editorial note.—It is the opinion of The Sentinel that Mr. Redford was no more careless than other drivers and did not take as many chances as many others have taken, but that the serious results of this accident will undoubtedly serve to make all more cautious.

Mr. Redford criticizes The Sentinel for saying anything about the accident. The Sentinel cares nothing for such criticism. It is the duty of a newspaper to print such news and all automobile accidents which come to the attention of The Sentinel will be duly reported without fear or favor and threats of bodily injury or libel suits will at no time influence the paper in the publication of the news as it occurs from week to week.]

Union Baptist Picnic is Great Success

Over 100 Gather at Beauty Grove, Have Dinner, Base Ball Game and Track Meet.

An unusually pleasant and enjoyable picnic party was the Baptist union picnic held last Wednesday at Beauty Grove near Saginaw. The Baptist Sunday schools of this city, Creswell and outlying districts joined for the affair and more than 100 attended. Automobiles and hayracks were the most popular conveyances but many went down on the train and others used teams. A basket dinner was served at noon after which a ball game between the Cottage Grove and Creswell Sunday schools was the feature. Creswell captured the long end of the 8 to 4 score. An impromptu track meet was held with the following results: Race for children under 6 years, Huston Dunn; boys' 50-yard dash, Orville Godard; girls' 50-yard dash, Grace Sanford; young men's race, Blake Wolbrook; hobble skirt race, Mattie Bouy; slim ladies' race, Mrs. D. P. Burton; fat ladies' race, Mrs. K. K. Mills and Mrs. David Griggs, tied.
