BRIEF WAR NEWS

At the end of three weeks' conflict none of the combatants succeeded in delivering a serious blow. The honors of the third week belong to Germany, but no achievement on either side deserves to be called a victory. The French gained gratifying successes in Alsace, and the Germans, by a steady pressure, obliged a large portion of the Belgian army to retire on Antwerp.

The German advance into Belgium was without serious check. Having taken Brussels, the troops of Emperor William forced their way steadily and rapidly to the north and west and overran the whole of northern and western Belgium, and southeast of Brussels they invested the fortified city of Namur on the Meuse.

British and French troops are facing a force believed to consist of the greater part of the German army along a battle line which extends from Mons to the frontier of Luxembourg.

Operations in other sections of Belgium indicate that few German forces are being spared from the great conflict. It is said only a small force continues in Brussels—perhaps 3000 men—and Antwerp reports the country in its vicinity cleared of Germans. Small forces are holding the villages along the line of march, to prevent interference with the route of communication.

The French developed an imposing encircling movement in Lorraine, trying to drive the Germans back toward Strassburg.

This was an offensive movement, containing possibilities of much danger, because of the enormously strong German fortifications in the area of operations. French troops gained half a dozen towns after several days' fighting, but the Germans suddenly took the offensive themselves and the French quickly retreated across the boundary, gaining nothing by their work.

St. Petersburg announces officially that the Russian army is advancing along the entire Austro-German frontier and at the same time successfully maintaining the offensive at every point of contact with the enemy.

The Russian advance into Prussia is following the line of the railway from Eydkuhnen toward Kongsburg. Opposed to it is an entire division of German infantry, heavily supported by artillery. The Germans are stubbornly defending their positions. Forced from one line, they move back to another already prepared, carrying their artillery with them. The Russians are forced to charge and take each advanced line of trenches at the point of the bayonet.

The main invasion of Austria is through the Styria river valley. Sweeping successes are reported in this section. The army from the mobilization triangle of Dubno, Revno and Krasne, has penetrated 35 miles inland in the general direction of Lemberg, capital of Galicia. Practically continuous fighting has occurred. In this fighting it is declared that an Austrian division was completely routed and that 17 guns and more than 1500 prisoners were taken. The Russians are reported as following up their advance and to be pushing on toward Lemberg.

A German official statement says that troops under the command of the Crown Prince of Bavaria, fighting between Metz and Vosges, took 10,000 prisoners and fifty guns. It adds that the French troops opposing the Germans comprised eight army corps. A Paris statement declares this is absurd but admits reverses in Lorraine.

Reports from the Austrian-Serbian boundary say that the Serbians have won a battle on the Drina, which military experts consider highly probable, as the Serbians have a comparatively small army but one which has passed through two years' actual war and therefore has the advantage of veterans fighting against amateurs.
