SOCIETY WOMEN OF OHIO RECEIVE RUDE SHOCK

Vainly ask Business Men to Aid Civic Beauty League—Become Highly Incensed.—Ensnaring Conference Develop Some Unexpected Results.

(By David Powell, Copyrighted, 1914.)

A quite novel, though none the less effective scheme to encourage home buying was inaugurated and carried to a successful issue by the women of Barburton, a city of 15,000 inhabitants located within easy trolley ride of Cleveland, Ohio.

A Civic Beauty League had been organized by the leading women of the city, and to carry out its purposes they appealed to the business men of the town for financial aid, never thinking that for so worthy a cause there would be any reluctance on the part of the merchants to subscribe.

As it so happened, the two or three women most active in promoting the league were very much given to running to Cleveland to buy a large share of their clothing, hats, house furnishings, etc., and when the matter came up before the Business Men's Association for endorsement several of the merchants present were of the opinion that this would be a rare opportunity to give these women a well merited rebuke. After some discussion it was decided to appoint a committee to meet with the ladies and explain to them that owing to poor business conditions caused by so much money being spent out of town it would be impossible for the merchants to help them at that time.

Though the ensuing conference between the committee and the ladies was held many years ago the members of that committee still retain very vivid memories of the occasion. After some two hours' discussion—mostly on the part of the women—the committee retired with as much grace as they could, martyrdom was not in vain.

Being whole hearted sensible American women, the ladies readily saw the force of the arguments presented by the business men, with the result that it was but a few days until their Beauty League was converted into a "Buy-At-Home" club, composed of only women and working independently of the merchants, though of course, the money necessary to conduct their campaign was solicited—and needless to say quite willingly subscribed—from the business interests of the city.

Through the medium of the local newspapers the women conducted a prize contest for the best ten reasons why people should buy from home merchants and was open only to contestants who were not connected in any way with local enterprises. As it was desired to create as much interest as possible in the contest the prizes offered were very substantial and so arranged that everyone sending in an article could feel almost sure of winning something.

Hardly a block in the city but contained one or more of the prize winners. The following article won the grand prize of $250.00 and after being prepared in pamphlet form in the most attractive style printer's art could be viewed, was placed in the hands of every resident of the city.

"We should patronize our home merchants because it is patriotic. That which prompts a man to don his armor, and if need be to give his life in defense of his country, is patriotism. Patriotism never counts the cost. It prompts the loyal citizen to lend his utmost action to the upbuilding of his country, his state and his city. No greater evidence of true patriotism can be displayed than the expending of your earnings with your home merchant, thus building up and strengthening the institutions of your home city, and adding to the general prosperity of your community.

"Because it will cheapen the price of merchandise in your home stores. The greater volume of business transacted by a merchant, the smaller will be the margin of profit he will require. By adding to his volume of business you make it possible for him to sell his wares cheaper, thus benefiting yourself as well as the entire community in which you live.

"Because the home store is an employing institution giving work to the sons and daughters of your friends and neighbors. The amount of patronage given such stores will regulate not only the number of persons employed but the scale of wages paid as well.

"Because a reciprocal relation exists between you and your home merchant. The money you earn is paid you by home institutions. No man can live on to himself. It is a duty we owe to spend our earnings, so far as possible, so that it will insure the upbuilding of community interests.

"Because your home merchant, desiring your trade tomorrow as well as today, knowing you well, being your neighbor and fellow citizen, will accord you more courteous treatment, and give your wants more careful attention than the merchant in a strange city to whom you are but a transient customer; an out-of-town purchaser to whom he can dispose of undesirable wares with perfect safety.

Dr. R. McCargar, now located in the Lawson block has taken a lease on the residence formerly occupied by Dr. Robbins at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets and expects to have his family moved in by the end of the week. He will use the annex for his dentistry business, which he expects to move within a week or ten days. Mac says dental work won't hurt after he gets moved as it will be "homeopathic" dentistry after he has moved closer to home.

A. C. Braekenburg of Brownsville is assisting Rev. Aldrich in his revival meetings this week.

Elbert Bede went to Salem Sunday morning, where he expects to remain during the legislative session.

W. H. Mills, linotype operator on the Eugene Daily Guard, is operating the linotype on The Sentinel during the absence of Mr. Bede.

"Because it is convenient. The busy woman can steal an hour from her other duties, go to the local stores, and not caring particularly about her gown for such a brief visit transact her errand in a hurry and be back by the time the children are home from school and John wants his supper.

"Because the home merchant has made a study of his community. He understands its peculiar needs, his wants and tastes of its people. His stock is bought with these facts in mind. He therefore offers better selections for home people, though his stock may not be so large as the out-of-town merchant whose selections have been made with a view to the tastes and needs of an entirely different community."

The distribution of the pamphlet containing the foregoing reasons, while of course doing some good, was but a minor feature of the campaign. The great effectiveness of the scheme lay in the use made of the bulk of the reasons submitted. It was very generally found that at least one of the ten reasons submitted by every contestant had some special merit and these were printed on cards bearing the name and address of the person writing it. Watchers were appointed to report the names of every resident of the town returning from Cleveland with a package, and from other sources was learned the names of anyone receiving freight or express shipments. By the next mail each of these people would receive one or more of these "reason cards," submitted by someone who lived in their same neighborhood. The second offense brought a dozen or so, and a continuation of the practice brought a flood of them at every repetition.

The effects of this persistent bombardment can be better imagined by the reader than described by the writer. Suffice to say, that within the year it was a rare exception to see shipped or carried into the town anything that could be purchased at home.

Indianapolis.—Virtually every member of the city administration of Terre Haute is in the hands of United States authorities as a result of the wholesale arrests there on indictments charging a conspiracy to corrupt the election of November 3 last.

Ninety-three persons including Mayor Roberts, who is a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor in 1916; Dennis Shea, sheriff of Vigo county; Circuit Judge Eli H. Redman; City Judge Thomas Smith and other leading Terre Haute politicians had been taken into custody.

Mayor Roberts, who is regarded as the leader of the alleged conspiracy to corrupt the Terre Haute election, is charged with many overt acts in the indictment.

It is charged that the postal laws were violated in that the alleged conspiracy was furthered through the mails. The federal authorities contend that inasmuch as a United States senator and a congressman were voted upon, the federal government has jurisdiction in the case.

Report of Puyallup Cannery.

In report of this association President W. H. Paulhuson remarks: "While it is too early to forecast the earnings of the cannery for the year 1914, the footings have been made as to the volume of business for the year as compared with 1913, covering the higher class of canned goods, with the following results: In syrup red raspberries the increase was 182 per cent over the year 1913; in syrup loganberries, 240 per cent; in syrup blackberries, 164 per cent; in syrup strawberries, 11 per cent. These showings are made in the face of the fact that the association did not accept many orders for loganberries and strawberries that were offered. During the year 1913 the association shipped 132 carloads of 40,000 pounds each; during the year 1914 this was increased to 280 carloads of 40,000 pounds each. The total number of cans used during the season 1913 was 1,135,672 as against 2,712,300 for the season 1914. In considering the unusual business conditions for the last six months of 1914, the increase of business done by the Puyallup & Sumner Fruit Growers' Association is a marvelous showing. In addition to the foregoing canned goods, the association has also handled practically 5,000 50-gallon barrels of berries. Sixty-five barrels make a minimum car. All of the goods have not been shipped as yet, owing to the surplus in certain lines, and orders in other lines are for later shipment; but the transportation paid on all lines only for the first 10 months of the year 1914 amounted to $191,529.

If the business of 1915 multiplies as heavily over the business season just closed as 1914 did over 1913, it is hard to tell to what height it will reach. Seven years ago, or the season of 1907, the association handled 14,000 crates of red raspberries that were shipped out for consumption. During the season just closed this business was increased to more than 174,000 crates, in addition to practically 3,000,000 pounds of red raspberries delivered to the canning plants belonging to the association."

Pasture in Pork Production
"To make pork production most profitable in all its phases Oregon growers should provide pasture for hogs wherever possible," says R. E. Reynolds, extension livestock man of the Agricultural College. "Fresh pasture has a beneficial effect on the health of the hog besides affording valuable nutrients for the ration. While grazing, the pigs obtain considerable exercise, which is essential to economical gains, especially in young pigs. It has been proved that cheaper gains can be made in a pasture than in a dry lot. Likewise soil fertility is maintained more steadily, since the manure, which is rich in fertilizing elements, is evenly distributed on the lands pastured."
