TESTED RECIPES.

Lamb and Spaghetti.
Materials—Five or six pound shoulder of lamb, three pint cans tomatoes, eight red onions, four green peppers, six little dried peppers, four cloves, garlic, spaghetti, salt and pepper.
Directions—Start lamb roasting in oven; beat tomatoes with onion, pepper and garlic chopped very fine, and the dried peppers, which should be crushed. When the lamb has browned for several minutes, salt it well and pour over the tomato. Let cook for two hours in a slow oven, basting the meat occasionally with the sauce. When nearly done the latter should be seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. When done put the meat on a platter and pour the sauce over three-fourths of a pound of spaghetti that has been previously boiled in salt water. Let stand in a warm place for a few moments, so that the spaghetti will be thoroughly seasoned with the sauce.

Whole-wheat Griddle Cakes.

Materials—Three cupfuls whole-wheat flour, one cupful bread flour, two cupfuls milk, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half teaspoonful salt, one egg.
Directions—Beat egg light, add milk, then the baking powder and salt mixed with the meal and flour. Cook as usual. If possible use an aluminum griddle, which needs no grease.

Potato Salad.

One pint of potatoes pared and sliced thin while hot; add one tablespoonful of grated onion, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley and enough salad dressing to make the mixture moist. Sliced apples may be added just before serving and a few roasted peanuts with the skins removed.

SAYS BRAKIE SHOVED HIM OFF MOVING TRAIN

'Tourist' Suffers Broken Arm and One of His Legs Is Severely Injured.

In falling from a moving freight train in the outskirts of the city Thursday morning, George C. Geist, a young man who says his home is at Cache, Okla., sustained a broken arm and one of his legs was severely injured. He is now at the Mercy Hospital at Eugene where he will be cared for at the expense of the county.

Geist was heading his way north on the freight and as the train was pulling out of here a brakeman ordered him off, according to his story. He says that he started to get off but the brakeman shoved him and he fell heavily to the ground. He lay on the ground where he had fallen and a physician who was called found that one of the bones of the left forearm was broken. "I guess I didn't get off quickly enough to suit him," said Geist. The injury was dressed and the young man sent to Eugene on the afternoon passenger train. He was met at the train by Deputy Sheriff George Croser with a cab and taken to the hospital. There are no bones broken in the leg that was injured but he can hardly walk upon it.

O. A. C. MANSAYS HANG ON TO LOGANBERRIES

Believes Market Must Be Developed to Care for Greatly Increased Production.

C. J. McIntosh, editor of Press Bulletin, published at the Oregon Agricultural College, writes The Sentinel as follows concerning the loganberry industry:

In connection with your story of "Loganberries Coming Into Their Own," says H. S. Gile, a recent story in St. Joseph, Mo., Fruit Grower, "Training the Berry to Travel," is of much interest and should help steady the growers who are inclined to dump their crops during the present tendency to slump. In 1912 there were but 5,500,000 boxes of loganberries grown in Oregon and in 1914 there were 10,000,000. The output was almost doubled in two years and can anyone pretend that there were enough organization and advertising behind the industry to double the market? Not much; something has been done in that direction and in the last year a great deal has been done, but the work was not undertaken early enough to create sufficient demand for the rapid increase in production. The situation was foreseen and pointed out repeatedly by Professor Lewis, who called attention to the fact that the way of all Oregon fruits to a paying basis had been through bad slumps, and that the loganberry men should learn from experience of the men handling the other fruits and open markets as rapidly as they increased production. But they allowed the production to outgrow markets and now they find that they have an unsold surplus. It is evident from the Gile story and the story in the Fruit Grower that the berry is beginning to travel, and we know that there are markets thousands of times larger than the berry enters now. The thorough campaign among fruit by-product manufacturers is convincing them of the merits of the berry for manufacture and will create a demand, according to Mr. Gile and the eastern writer. Grapes were grown for several thousand years before there was a Welch to spend a fortune in sending grape juice into every promising market where it soon paid back all it had cost and made huge fortunes besides. The loganberry need not wait for the far-seeing capitalist if the growers will organize and put a certain percent of their crops into a free sample and advertising fund for opening the markets. Different growers now talk quit, and many doubtless will tear out their vines and maybe it will pay them to, for nobody else knows their own business so well as they know it; but as to the future of the loganberry, it is thought by the best informed persons that it is assured and that the industry will be a source of large revenue for Oregon loganberry men.
