

The Judge Says--

Put a package of these real corn flakes—these

New Post Toasties

on trail beside a package of any other corn flakes on the market. The jury will bring in a verdict of "guilty"—guilty of being the finest corn flakes ever made.

The New Post Toasties are crisp and appetizing, with a true corn flavor; and they don't mush down when milk or cream is added.

But here's the real test. Take a handful, fresh from the package, and eat them without cream or milk. Mighty good, aren't they?

Notice the little "puffs" on each flake—a distinguishing characteristic—resulting from the new method of cooking and toasting, which also brings out and enhances the wonderful, true corn flavour.

Your Grocer has the New Post Toasties. Try them and bring in your verdict—

Ma Can't Vote

Ma's a graduate of college, and she's read most everything; She can talk in French and German, she can paint and she can sing, Beautiful! She's like a picture. When she talks she makes you think Of the sweetest kind of music, and she doesn't smoke or drink. Oh, I can't begin to tell you all the poems she can quote; She knows more than half the lawyers do; but ma can't vote.

When my pa is writing letters, ma must always linger near To assist him in his spelling and to make his meaning clear. If he needs advice, her judgment, he admits, is always best; Every day she gives him pointers, mostly at his own request. She keeps track of legislation, and is taxed on bonds and stocks, But she never gets a look-in at the sacred ballot box.

Ma is wiser than our coachman, for he's not a graduate, And I doubt if he could tell you who is governing the state. He has never studied grammar, and I'll bet he doesn't know Whether Caesar lived a thousand or two thousands years ago. He could never tell us how to keep the ship of state afloat, For he doesn't know there's such a thing—but ma can't vote.

Once when Mr. Jones was calling they got up a short debate That was on the tariff question; he supposed he had it straight But before they'd finished talking he threw up his hands and said That he'd not read much about it, nor remembered what he'd read. He's too badly rushed to study how to better human lives, Still he looms up like a giant when election time arrives.

Mrs. Gooskins does our washing, for she has to help along Taking care of her six children, though her husband's big and strong. When he gets a job, he only holds it till he draws his pay, Then he spends his cash for whiskey or else gambles it away. I suppose his brain's no bigger than the brain of any goat, And he'd trade his ballot for a drink—but ma can't vote!

—Chicago Record-Herald.

Sometimes you hear a man say nice things about you when you are aching to have him say something that will give you an excuse for punching his face.

REFUSING MONEY

HERE ARE a large number of people who believe the newspaper business is one in which no business man with good judgment will embark.

There are others who think a newspaper will do anything for money—that money will open its columns to anything or close them to undesirable news.

Perhaps the first group of people are right. Perhaps the newspaper business is one of which real business men are chary. At any rate it seems that few business men get into the newspaper business.

As an example of what poor business men newspapermen are, The Sentinel during the past week refused a contract for $50 worth of advertising. This is not the first time it has acted thusly. Every year several hundreds of dollars' worth of advertising is refused.

No other business in Cottage Grove would refuse to sell its goods to the same people to which The Sentinel has refused to sell. Any other business in Cottage Grove would be glad to exchange its wares for the money which The Sentinel has refused.

Even after we tell that the advertising was for a well known brand of whiskey, we venture to say that a large number of our readers will say that we were foolish not to take the advertising.

It will be carried by the Portland dailies. It will be printed in many of the leading magazines. Why should a country newspaper refuse real money? The Sentinel is curious to know just how its readers feel on this subject.

USE this example to refute the statement that money can get anything into a newspaper. No one has ever tempted The Sentinel by offering to pay to keep something out of the paper, but The Sentinel adheres strictly to its belief that a newspaper has certain responsibilities—certain duties to perform—against which financial considerations should have no weight. Money is important but there are other things that The Sentinel values more highly. That is the reason it refused the whiskey advertising.

STICK TO ONE BUSINESS

HOW MUCH do you know about one business?

Or do you know something about a dozen lines of business?

The sooner you stick to one business through thick and thin, and learn everything there is to know about it, the sooner you will reach the top.

Don't be one of the hundreds of young men who work at a new job each month or so, and change their minds about their work many times a year. Never be tempted to seek another job just because you can make a little more money at it. This is the poorest possible policy. The most money will come to you after you have worked hard to master your business, not before. It is better to work four years for six dollars a week and know all about your business, than to work four years at twelve dollars a week and be master of nothing.

Look yourself squarely in the face—are you working to understand the business or to draw your pay? The money you earn while learning a business is a trifle compared with the training. Training will earn dividends for you many years after your weekly pay is spent.

You can't dig a well by making a lot of three-foot holes in a dozen places. You've got to keep on digging down, down, at one place until you strike water, and then the well is made forever.

Concentrate your energy on one business. Don't tire of it—there is no business on earth which hasn't a lot of drudgery in it. Stick to one business; and you'll win.—Spare Moments.

BEST WISHES

IF NOT the most important news item of the past week, at least the most interesting was the announcement of the engagement of President Wilson. The news came as a complete surprise to the country at large. Few thought that the little god of love had been able to get the attention of the President while the god of war was so boisterously demanding all of the chief executive's time.

Recognizing that it is not good for man to live alone, that since the death of the former Mrs. Wilson in August of 1914 the President's life has been a lonely one and that his present choice is evidently a wise and suitable one, all join in wishing the "happy young couple" a long life of wedded bliss.

Youth's Companion: Already we begin to get a glimpse of what the conditions will be in Europe after the war. Vorwärts of Berlin figures that the entire income of Germany before the war will be only a little more than enough to pay pensions and the interest on the national debt. All the ordinary costs of government—and they will be greatly increased, of course—will have to be raised by new taxation.

Making Buttonholes

To make buttonholes on thin material, before cutting the buttonholes, baste a piece of India linen or muslin underneath where the buttonholes are to be. Cut the buttonholes through both and work. When finished cut away the piece of goods underneath, close to the work. The result is a good firm buttonhole.
