State's Forest Resources.

If all the timber in the state was sawed into boards one by twelve inches and pinned end to end they would reach from here to a point a million miles past the sun.

Of all the people engaged in manufacturing industries in the state, nearly 50 per cent are employed in the lumber industry.

Twelve per cent of the people of Oregon are directly dependent upon the lumber industry. No other manufacturing industry in the state employs one-tenth as many men as this one.

The annual cut of lumber is over 2,000,000,000 feet, valued at $39,000,000, or 32.5 per cent of the total value of the manufactured products in the state. Eighty per cent of this is paid out for labor.

Over $70,000 of outside money is each day brought into the state by the lumber industry.

Eighty per cent of our outgoing freight is lumber.

Oregon has one-fifth of the standing timber in the United States, which will be worth, when manufactured, at least nine billion, nine hundred million dollars.

Already the revenue derived from this source exceeds that from wheat, fruit, vegetables and fish combined, and the annual cut is only about 0.4 per cent of the total stumpage.

Oregon timber area is about 25,000,000 acres, of which one-half is privately owned.

The standing timber of Oregon, if cut into lumber, would fill 413,500 trains of 60 cars each, or 24,800,000 car loads, which would reach around the earth.—Fred P. Cronemiller, in O. A. C. Student Engineer.

Funston Former Oregonian.

Major General Fredrick Funston, U. S. A., who was put in full charge of the Mexican expeditionary forces of the United States by President Wilson, once worked in the Crown Willamette Pulp & Paper company's mills at Oregon City, nearly a quarter of a century ago.
