Our present Assessor in a published statement in which the pronoun "I" frequently occurs, and in which he deplores the fact that the public remains unprotected from "malicious" design and "deception," warns us beware of those persons making claims of large savings, then goes on to inform us that he has saved the taxpayers Seventy-six Thousand Dollars in a period of four years.

How unfortunate for we "other" taxpayers the O. & C. R. R. Congressional Lands are again in the hands of Congress for final disposition, and there are no taxes being paid on them, although assessed, and that other Railroad property, as well as all Public Utilities, are now, and have been for several years, assessed by the State Tax Commission and not by our Assessor, otherwise our taxes might have continued getting lower (f), and lower (f), as this chimerical saving continued to increase.

As our Assessor warns us, let us be not deceived by delusions of large savings, you Mr. Taxpayer, know better than any one else whether or not YOUR assessed value has been raised in proportion, and whether YOUR taxes have been lowered by this chimerical saving.

In my declaration of candidacy I made the following modest statement: First—That I would keep on the job myself, and eliminate a head deputy at Twelve Hundred Dollars per year.

Second—That I would so write the tax rolls, that according to James C. Parker, Tax Collector, a man who has had 8 or 10 years' experience in collecting taxes in Lane County, had they been so written he could have saved $2,000.00 on the expense of tax collecting this year alone.

I therefore ask your earnest consideration of my declaration that I could and would, if nominated and elected Assessor, REALLY SAVE the taxpayers during the next term of office at least $10,000.00.

Yours to help lower taxes, mch22-29 Pd. Adv. D. P. BURTON.

Three Cent Hogs Questioned.

"Statements recently made by men supposed to know, that hogs may be raised in the Willamette valley for three cents per pound, are certainly misleading and if followed out will bring discredit on the entire movement for better agriculture in the Northwest," said Professor Potter of the Oregon Agricultural college experiment station, in commenting on reports of the farmers' and stockmen's recent excursion to the Portland Union stockyards. "To tell a group of farmers that they do not know how to feed because they say they can not raise hogs for less than six cents is surely not very complimentary to the farmers, many of whom have devoted much time, money, and thought to the hog problem. The agricultural college is working hard on the hog situation and we want to do everything we can to encourage the hog producers, but already the greatest difficulty with which we have to contend is the mistaken idea that it does not cost 'much of anything' to raise a pig. This idea has led many to go into hog raising on a scale and under conditions which doomed them to failure from the very start. This failure discourages others who are really located where they could make a satisfactory profit out of a few hogs.

"Hogs must be fed a very considerable amount of grain under the most favorable conditions, but one time with another the profit must come out of the waste products that are fed with the grain, such as skim milk from the dairy farms, waste from the orchards, and the stubble and waste grain from the fields. Under such conditions Oregon can produce all the hogs the local markets will handle and produce them profitably at current prices of hogs and feed. When the producer does not depend upon the marketing of some waste products through his hogs he can not expect better than to break even, unless there is a radical change in marketing conditions, a change which can not reasonably be expected, since the relative prices of grain and hogs are now about normal and while changes are to be expected, they are just as likely to go one way as the other."

Points on Care of Your Car.

Half the cars brought to the repair shop are brought there unnecessarily; that is, a little care from time to time would have avoided the trouble.

It takes only a little time, given systematically, to keep a car in good running condition, and the only need of a repair shop under such conditions is when parts commence to show wear from long operation.

To secure satisfactory work from an automobile engine, attention must be given to at least four particular points. The carburetor must be properly adjusted, the combustion chamber free from carbon, the spark plugs must be in good condition and oil should be reasonably fresh and clean. Now, all of these points can be attended to by the owner or user, provided he has the disposition to do so; technical skill is not at all necessary.

The first and most important point, of course, is the adjustment of the carburetor, which should be so adjusted that the mixture will not be too rich or too lean. The proper mixture is one that is just as lean as possible, as a thin mixture is faster and more powerful than that a rich mixture. All that is necessary is to thin out the mixture by increasing the air or cutting down on the gasoline supply until you arrive at a condition where with a cold engine there would be a sneezing or coughing in the carburetor, which symptom will pass away as soon as the engine is warm. This is a very easy adjustment for anyone to make.

The next important point is to keep the carbon out of the combustion chamber, and this is also very easily attended to by any one by scraping the carbon loose with carbon scrapers, and blowing the loose carbon out of the valve domes, or the valve caps, with a foot pump, bellows or compressed air. The only point to be careful about is to see that the bottom valves are shut, so that none of the loose carbon will get under one of the valve seats.

To insure the piston being in firing position, proceed as follows: Remove the valve caps or domes from No. 1 cylinder, open the pet cocks in the other cylinders, crank the engine over by hand and watch the inlet valve until it rises and then sets.

The next time piston comes to the top it will be in firing position and both valves are shut with the piston anywhere near the top. With the piston at the top, or within one-fourth of an inch of the top of the stroke, go in with your set of three carbon scrapers and scrape the carbon loose and blow it out as above directed. Screw in the valve domes and pass on to the next cylinder, working on one cylinder at a time.

To see that spark plugs are right, there must be no cracked porcelain.

The spark plug must be reasonably clean, and the important point is that the spark plug points must be 1-32 of an inch apart. Spark plugs should occasionally be inspected as to the spark gap, because this distance is sometimes increased by the slow burning away of the spark plug wires from the action of the electric spark.

The oil in the engine crank should be drained every 1000 miles and the crank case washed out with kerosene and fresh oil supplied. After draining off the old oil, close the drain plug and put one gallon of kerosene in the crank case, start the engine and run it for a minute, and then drain off the kerosene and fill the engine with fresh oil. As stated, this should be done every 1000 miles, because after the oil has been splashed around in the engine for that distance there is very little oil to it and it is more like dirty water than oil.

By attention to the above four points any automobile user should get long continued, satisfactory service from his engine.

Not one woman in a hundred really knows how to wash dishes. As it seems to be their special prerogative, this sounds extravagant, but it is true. A peep into the sterilizing rooms of one of the big hospitals would provide some valuable suggestions along this line. First scrape the dishes and then hold each one under a running spigot. Two dish mops with handles hang conveniently near the sink. One of these is the "dirty" mop. With it you mop off the actual food that clings to the dishes and then plunge them into a dishpan of boiling water, which is moderately soapy. Then take the clean mop and quickly mop off the dish. Fish it to the surface of the water, remove it with a tea towel in your hand and place it to drain on the rack. The heat absorbed by the cup or platter will quickly dry it without the
