Building a Battleship.

Do you know how many hours' work it takes to build a modern dreadnaught? Probably you have never given the matter a thought, so it will interest you to learn that a big battleship entails about 7,200,000 man hours, or labor equivalent to the work of one man working that time.

The making of the turbine machinery absorbs some 1,850,000 man hours, and the mountings of the big guns can easily acquire two years' work, while a single armor plate may take nearly three months to finish. None of these processes can be unduly hurried, as the very best work must be put in, the least scumpling making all the difference between victory and defeat.

Between 40 and 50 per cent of the cost of a dreadnaught's hull goes in labor. Curiously enough, far less is spent on labor when constructing a turbine engine than when making one of the old reciprocating type. Much of the material is made by machinery, leaving only 25 per cent of the cost for labor, whereas 45 per cent went in wages when the older kind were in use.—London Telegraph.

Armenia's Royal Pretenders.

The last king of Armenia died in Paris in 1903, but his alleged descendants have frequently asserted their rights to the Armenian crown. The last well authenticated claimant, Guy de Lusignan, died in a Parisian cellar in 1795, but a considerable stir was created some forty years ago by the pretensions of an Armenian family named Khorian. Archbishop Khorian, the head of the family, gained many influential supporters in England and on the continent, but was unable to attain his modest desire that Cyprus should be made over to him as a first step toward the complete restoration of the Armenian kingdom. One of his brothers married an English lady, who may be still living. Another wedded Victor Hugo's friend, Mlle. de Nostrade, who subsequently styled herself Princess Marie de Lusignan of Cyprus, Jerusalem, and Armenia.—London Globe.

"Temper" and "Humor."

The history of the words "temper" and "humor" is very curious. According to ancient physiology, the human body included four "humors" (liquids)—blood, phlegm, bile and black bile or melancholia. Their combination formed a man's "temperament"—and we speak of sanguine, phlegmatic and melancholic temperaments to this day. "Temper," the synonym of "temperament," has undergone the strange developments which we have noted, so that "losing your temper" and "being in a temper" mean the same thing. Excess of one humor over the rest led to oddities; whence a "humorous" man came to signify an eccentric person. And now "humorous" applies not to the odd person, but to the man who sees the oddity in him.—London Spectator.

Individual Verdicts.

The jury had been out for hours. The judge looked tired, the clerk yawned, the loungers slept.

The bailiff, after listening at the key-hole several times, shook his head with a discouraged air.

And then, quite unexpectedly, the jury announced it was ready to report, and the twelve ladies filed in.

"Have you agreed upon a verdict?" the demanded.

"The forelady smiled.

"We have agreed upon twelve verdicts, your honor," she told him in her stutlike voice.

"You are discharged!" roared the judge.

"Isn't he horrid?" said the ladies.—Exchange.

Just to Help Out.

"Well, well!" exclaimed Mr. Dubson to a flustered acquaintance who rushed into a railroad station carrying two large suit cases. "Going away on the choo-choo?"

"Oh, no," answered the acquaintance in a sarcastic tone. "My sole idea in buying a railway ticket and hastening hither with all the baggage I could stagger under was merely to increase the stir and bustle of this great city."—Exchange.

Going the Rounds.

"How is it you know so much about the neighbors' affairs as you tell at the club?"

"Oh, my wife's maid picks it up from the other servants, and then my wife will insist on repeating it all to me. You know how women will gossip."—Baltimore American.

Too Much Ambition.

"I can't understand why you discharged my boy. You advertised for a boy with ambition, and he—"

"That's just it, madam; that's just it. He wasn't in the place two days before he had his feet on my desk and was smoking my cigars."—

The Sacrifice.

Mrs. Richleigh (sorrowfully)—I wish you had more brains, Ferdinand, instead of so much money. Ferdinand (unmoved)—I did once, dear, but it took all of them to get money.

Flirtation.

"What really constitutes flirtation?" asked the young man of the woman of the world.

Salary.

Soldiers once received salt as part of their pay. When the salt was commuted for cash the latter was called "salarium," salt money, or "salary."

The golden rule measures business better than the wooden yardstick.

A Bit of Advice

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Cottage Grove residents desire more convincing proof of their effectiveness than the statement of a Cottage Grove citizen who has used them and willingly testifies to their worth?

Mrs. J. J. Moore, Sixth St., Cottage Grove, says: I am more or less subject to kidney trouble. My back gets very sore and lame at times and during this misery, my kidneys are irregular in action and I feel tired-out and depressed generally. After I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills a few days, my back feels as strong as ever and the action of my kidneys becomes regular.

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. sep28oct5
