ALLIES REJECT U. S. MAIL SEIZURE CLAIMS

Reply in Effect Admits Immunity in Principle But Denies in Practice.

Washington.—The reply of France and Great Britain to the American demands respecting Anglo-French interference with American mails on the high seas and the unlawful diversion of mail ships into British ports, is an undignified rejection of all the state department's contentions.

The note in effect admits in principle, but denies in practice, the immunity of mail, which is recognized in international law. Great Britain and France assert they have the right to inspect American mails while seeking both contraband and enemy correspondence.

The two allied governments claim the right to divert neutral mail ships from their courses and take them into allied ports for the purpose of inspecting, censoring or confiscating mail matter.

The American position is that Great Britain has no right forcibly to take neutral vessels into British ports except with the permission of the government whose flag the ships fly.

The only concessions the British and French governments make are contained in the following passage from their note:

"As regards shipping documents and correspondence found on neutral vessels, even in an allied port, and offering no interest of consequence affecting the war, the allied governments have instructed their authorities not to stop them but to see that they are forwarded with as little delay as possible."

Promise of financial compensation for injuries suffered by Americans by reason of the unlawful operation of the censorship is contained in the concluding paragraph of the note.

CASE IS NOT YET SETTLED

Washington Not Satisfied With Note Concerning Mail Interference.

Washington.—Examination of the allies' note on the censorship of mails has brought a feeling among officials that it does not satisfactorily meet the protests set forth in the American note of May 24, which said that "only a radical change, restoring to the United States its full rights as a neutral power, will satisfy this government."

All the information reaching the department is understood to indicate that the allies have determined to maintain their firmest attitude on the subject, feeling that absolute vital interests are involved. Officials are said to feel, therefore, that any further step by the United States might bring the controversy to a much more critical stage.

ARMY ON BORDER IS STILL NEEDED

Long Branch, N. J.—President Wilson, in reply to a letter from Governor Whitman, of New York, in regard to the New York militia on the border, declared that the emergency which caused the sending of the militia to the Mexican border "unhappily still exists." He added, however, that he believed conditions in northern Mexico are improving and that "in the near future" it probably will be possible to "do more than has been done to relieve the embarrassments under which organized militia regiments have necessarily suffered."

The president in his letter declared he had been advised by the war department that a withdrawal of the militia at any time since they were sent to the border "would in all human likelihood have been followed by fresh aggressions from Mexico upon the lives and property of the people of the United States."
