

The Cantilever Spring Is the Thing

Especially the Bate Underslung Cantilever—

Not one broken in two years—

More than 29,000 Mitchell cars with cantilever springs are in service and not one cantilever spring has been broken. Not one leaf has given way. This same factor of strength has been applied all the way through the construction of the Mitchell, but it is remarkable that such a record can be made with springs. The Mitchell Cantilever Spring is different. In the first place the extra long wheel base of Mitchell cars enables us to use an extra long spring, 60 inch in the Mitchell Jr. and 62 inch in the seven-passenger Mitchell. The superiority of the Bate Cantilever lies largely in its suspension. Note that it is carried directly under the frame, right under the load, the same as you would place the foundation of a house. Then it is hung on flexible hangers in front, center and rear, so that there is every opportunity of absorbing road shocks without extreme spring action. The Mitchell is claimed by many to be the easiest riding of all cars. Call on us and let us take you out over the rough places in the new Mitchell so that you can judge for yourself of its riding qualities, as well as its power, appearance and equipment.

Also A Shock Absorbing Front Spring

The Mitchell front spring is now built with a spring leaf set counter to the main leaves, which acts as a rebound strap and prevents spring breakage. This is a feature that is found only on the Mitchell. It is one of the number of extras that you get on the Mitchell and not on any other car in its price class. Call today and look over the new MITCHELL.

SPRING FLOWERS

By Mrs. Tilla P. Taylor
Ri-bes San-quin-e-un.
Blood-red and white, his pennants gay
Ribes flings to the breeze.
A beautiful kingdom is his to guard,
As a warrior he stands at ease.

This red-man brave of the western wood,
True Oregon pioneer,
Friend of the lion, the bear and the wolf,
Has much from a child to fear;

Who, with ruthless hands, for a minute's joy,
His colors flings on the sand,
Robs his kingdom, and passes on
To join a ravaging band.

No weapons are his for his own defense.
How, then, can he guard the line?
His kingdom will suffer as all must do
Who have neither sting nor spine.

Ribes is from the Arabic; sanguineum means blood, the color of the flowers of the red currant. Unlike the gooseberry, which belongs to the same family, the currant has no thorns.

Who teaches a child a respect for all life,
Even that of the fragile flower,
Has saved the child, and himself as well,
From sorrow's wasteful hour.

Who studies with nature her wonderful ways,
Soon loses the lust to destroy;
He makes the earth his own who has learned
The beauty of life to enjoy.

"Study the lilies," the Master said,
Who came to bring life to the earth;
But his pupils were all so much wiser
Than he,
They taught the child war from its birth.

It is glory to crush in covetous hands—
What he wills, 'tis his right to destroy—
The world is reaping in anguish and tears
What was sown in the heart of a boy.
