THE KAISER'S PRAYER, HIS LAST ULTIMATUM.

[The Germans are first before the throne of God—thou couldst not place the golden crown of victory in purer hands.—Herr J. Suse, German prose writer.]
Gott, Gott, dear Gott, attention please,
Your partner, Wilhelm, is here
Und has a word or two to say
Indo your private ear;
So turn away all others now,
Und listen veil to me.
For vat I say concerns me much,
Meinself and Shermany.
You know dear Gott, I was your friend,
Und from my hour of birth
I quietly let you rule de heffen,
Vile I ruled o'er the earth;
Und ven I toldt mine soldiers
Of by-gone battle days,
I gladly split de glory
Und gave you half de praise.
In every way I tried to prove
Mein heart to you was true,
Und only claimed mine honest share,
In great deeds dat ve do;
You could not have a better friend,
In sky and land or sea,
Dan Kaiser Wilhelm number two,
Der Lord of Shermany.

So vat I say, dear Gott, is dis:
Dat ve should still be friends,
And you should help to send mine foes
To meet their bitter ends.
If you dear Gott, will dis me do,
I'll nothing ask again,
Und you and I will partners be,
Forevermore.—Amen.
But listen Gott, it must be quick,
For help to me you sendt,
Or else I have to stop attack,
Und only blay defendt.
So four and twenty hours I give,
To make de Allies run,
Und put me safe indo mine place,
De middle of de sun.

If you do dis, I'll do mine part,
I'll tell de world de fact,
But if you don't, den I must tink
It is an hostile act;
Den var at vonce I will declare,
Und in mine anger rise,
Und sendt mine Seppin ships to wage
A fight up in de skies.
Dis ultimatum now dear Gott,
Is von of many more,
Mine mindt is settled up to clean
De whole world off de floor,
Because you was mine partner, Gott,
An extra chance is giffen,
So help at once, or else I'll be
DE EMPEROR OF HEFFEN.

WHAT MOTHERHOOD MEANS TO ME.

(By Kathleen Norris in Today's Housewife.)
YEARS ago I knew a lovely old Irish lady who chanced to have spent her honeymoon in Rome. To the end of her life she used to say that, if she could do it, she would like to send every woman in the world to Rome for that happiest time in her life; to stand, in the glory of her youth and hope, in the moon-flooded Coliseum, her hand, with its new ring, slipped in her husband's arm, and to have memory of those wonderful days mingled with memories of spring on the Apian Way.
But now that I am reaching the age when wistful girls turn to me to know the real and the worth-while things of life, I think that my own wish for every woman in the world would be that motherhood would come to her.
Not because children are the nation's riches, not because marriage without children is unnatural, not because motherhood is a duty—no. These are good arguments, but better than any of them, humanly speaking, is the fact that no joy on earth equals the joy of healthy motherhood, and no self-expression that a woman can achieve is so satisfying as this.

It was my fortune as a girl to become intimate with more than one very rich woman, and of late years I have known women famous in various ways, women who seem to have the world at their feet, and yet among them all I never knew a woman richer or more radiantly content than was my own mother, raising seven plainly-dressed, plainly-fed children in a California garden. It was not only that she was happy, but that she knew she was happy; she had all the triumphant security of a man who has removed himself from the noise of cities, and the temptations of outside, the better to conduct an extremely flourishing little business.
A business it is, you remember; the most important that ever comes to a woman's life, and infinitely more important than anything a man ever can do. A man's work may improve and enlighten and enrich the world; our children are that world. Why not regard your family as your business?—and determine that if anything jeopardizes it, you will remove that element, whatever it is; you will do anything rather than give up your business!

Various causes do make motherhood a hard, and sometimes a thankless, undertaking. But go after the causes; don't blame motherhood. It ought to be the most simple and happy and exquisite thing in life. If false social standards, or drink, or badly adjusted domestic budget, or extravagance, or poor health, are making your motherhood a burden, set yourself to change them, if not for yourself, for the daughter that comes after you. Study motherhood, as everything worth-while must be studied. Find out what is wrong with the conditions that govern it.
But never believe that life can bring you anything more exquisite than those months of waiting, that half-fearful and half-proud accumulation of pink blankets and white slips, that hard, long journey to the quiet room where you lie dreaming, with the tiny dark head dreaming beside you. Never believe that fame or fortune could bring you any breakfasts as happy as those breakfasts through which the baby drums with a big spoon, and chews on a hard crust, and bobs his little shining head up and down tirelessly, beside the coffee-pot. When your three-year-old smiles with wet lashes at the sight of his mended wagon, when your little daughter leans against your shoulder with a half-shy question, when your schoolboy looks up from his home work to find your opinion on some point of boyish honor, yours is the greatest business in the world.
It is impossible to over-estimate the power of a good mother. Has any advice, any opinion of later years, ever made the impression on you that your mother's words did, so many years ago, when you leaned on the kitchen table and watched her cutting cookies, and listened to her pure and simple dreams for her girls and boys?
Did it ever occur to you that if certain mothers, fifty or sixty years ago—certain mothers whose boys were destined to become generals and ministers of state and emperors—had given their little sons a truer ideal of love and fellowship, there would be peace and not war in the world today?

LET'S MAKE BUSINESS UNUSUAL.
BUSINESS is activity. Economy is efficiency. Economy is not slowing down. Economy is speeding up and finding new uses for everything. Throughout the war the wise men of England have striven to maintain the industrial structure of the empire intact despite all difficulties, and their slogan is "Business as Usual."
Now America has entered the war. The hope of the world is on us. That hope from without and our hope from within must be realized by a true conception of what is meant by economy. Remember the parable of the man who buried his master's money so it would be safe and whose fellow used his master's money to make an increase.
Economy is doing the best you can with what you have in yourself, in what you own, and what you can influence.
It means a joining of hands, figuratively, of every man, woman, and child in this great country, so as to work together that our resources shall be activated and moved by our common patriotism.
It means more doing; more intelligent spending; more distribution of information of how, where, and when goods may be had of all kinds to meet every human requirement. It does not mean hoarding; it means sowing, spending; for the business soil of the American nation has been scarcely touched.
Let us awaken to the truth of economy and make "business unusual." You may not wear the khaki, but you can "come across." Spend money wisely—but spend it. Which means, use it.—Linotype Bulletin.

OBSTINATE GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED

Readiness Shown to Make Any Sacrifices to Hold Allied Armies in Check.

Paris.—Sixteen times since May 20 the Germans have attacked the positions taken from them on that day by the French at Mount Carnillet and the Heights of the Teton and the Casque, south of Moronvilliers, in the Champagne. All the efforts have been characterized by the greatest obstinacy, the assaulting waves retiring only when their ranks were so thinned by French three-inch shells and machine gun fire that they could no longer hold them.

The most violent of these attacks was one upon the Casque and the Teton, which are the most advantageous observation points in this sector, commanding a view of the entire Moronvilliers region. The fighting went on all day.
That the Germans are prepared to go to almost any length in sacrifices of men to hold the situation on the western front in hand, seems apparent. Along the line held by the French, the effort is taking the form of almost ceaseless counter attacks, both in the Aisne region and in the Champagne. Although suffering a sanguinary repulse on Sunday in repeated attacks on the Vauclere and Californie plateaus, they made a new thrust further west, near Froimont farm, along the Chemin-des-Dames plateau. The French report shows this to have had some measure of success, the crown prince's troops forcing their way into some advanced French positions.

LOST PROVINCES MUST BE RETURNED

Paris.—By a vote of 453 to 55 the chamber of deputies in secret session has adopted a resolution declaring that peace conditions must include the liberation of territories occupied by Germany, the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France and just reparation for damage done in the invaded regions. The resolution, which was accepted by the government, also favors the creation of a league of nations for the maintenance of peace.
Speaking to the resolution, Premier Ribot said:
"This resolution affirms our national sovereignty. It declares that in a democracy like ours there can be no secret diplomacy. None can or want to finess with the national sovereignty. None has entertained such thoughts. French policy is the policy of frankness and clearness."

PROTECTION FOR FARMERS

President Assures Northwest Wheat Men of Intent to Guarantee Price.
Washington.—Spring wheat growers of the northwest were assured by President Wilson in a personal interview that the government intends to protect farmers in marketing their crops and that prices will be guaranteed high enough to stimulate production. The farmers' representatives were told that the government hopes permanent marketing reforms may grow out of wartime measures.
It is not the present intention to fix minimum prices, the president said, as the government believes production prices will remain high without putting this measure into effect.

Berlin Reports Portuguese in Battle.
Berlin.—The first official statement that Portuguese troops are now fighting on the western front was made here. In announcing the capture of 1000 yards of French trenches northeast of Solissons by a surprise attack, the war office stated that among the prisoners captured were some Portuguese.

Big Lumber Market Created by War.
Washington.—Two billion feet of lumber will be required within the next year for war purposes, according to an estimate by the lumber committee of the council of national defense.

American Mission Reaches Russia.
Washington.—Safe arrival at a Russian port of the American commission to Russia headed by Elihu Root, ambassador extraordinary, was announced in a dispatch to the navy department.

Idaho Ex-Governor Dies.
Boise, Idaho.—John M. Haines, governor of Idaho in 1913 and 1914, died at his home here after a long illness. He was 54 years old.

Chinese Capital Joins Rebellion.
Pekin.—Eleven provinces of China, including the province of Chi-Li, in which Peking is situated, now no longer recognize the authority of the Peking government.

EARN PIN MONEY BY DIGGING DANDELIONS

Selling dandelion roots at 4 to 6 cents a pound offers a pretty fair premium on removing the dandelion pests from the lawn, field or pasture.
Since 100,000 pounds or more are imported into the United States annually it seems that many a young boy or girl ought to make pretty fair wages by collecting and preparing dandelion roots for the drug trade. The root is used medicinally in diseases of the liver and

THE WORLD'S LEADING BRAND OF SEPARATORS
UNITED STATES CREAM SEPARATOR
More Than Value Received

IT isn't the amount paid for a Cream Separator that makes it profitable—it's the returns received. One Separator may cost $30.00 and another may cost $75.00; yet the chances are the $75.00 investment will be the cheaper one of the two, by doing more and better work, requiring less effort and less cost for up-keep for each dollar spent.
DON'T be content to use an old style machine year after year, simply because you have it. Good dairy practice does not permit "scrub" stock to eat their heads off, and fall below a profitable milk yield, simply because they happen to belong to the herd.
PROGRESS demands a constant improvement in the mechanical end of the dairy as well as among the stock.

for dyspepsia, reports H. S. Hammond, of the U. S. C. botany department.
Digging up the root for control and also for securing the maximum amount of material for sale is best accomplished by the use of a spud or stout-bladed knife. The plant grows so low that the frequent cutting of the lawn with the mower does not seem to have as good effect as with taller weeds. The plants must be destroyed below the crown of the root in order to kill them and of course it is necessary to go much deeper in order to get most of the root, which is thick, tapering, and sometimes fully 20 inches in length.
Another method of control is spraying with iron sulphate. The spraying must be done on bright days and at frequent intervals to be effective. It will prevent them from maturing seed and according to experiments in Dakota and Rhode Island it has been known to remove the pest entirely from lawns.
Except that it is a nuisance in lawns the dandelion is not a bad weed, since its leaves are eaten by most stock and form the basis of many a mess of greens for the home table. The leaves are eaten frequently in salads in the early spring, both in Europe and in this country.
