An 8½-pound daughter was born to

on him twice. Citizens who watched the work of the two last sessions of the legislature remember very well the active part taken by Senator Huston as one of the leaders of the Multnomah delegation.

Senator Huston was born on a farm at New Philadelphia, Indiana, March 16, 1858. His father enlisted in the Eighteenth Indiana volunteer infantry and was killed in the Civil war. His boyhood days were spent on farms in Indiana and Illinois. He was educated at the University of Northern Indiana, Valparaiso; attended law school in Chicago and was admitted to the bar December, 1879.

Mr. Huston came to Oregon in May, 1883, and worked in a shingle camp and on a farm until January, 1884, when he began practicing law at Hillsboro. In 1884 he married Ella Geiger, a daughter of a pioneer of 1839.

quicker by vigorous fighting than by temporizing. He goes further and declares that payment of the cost of the war should be taken from excess profits, incomes and inheritances, and that following the war a system of taxation should be adopted which would relieve the middle class of people of the great burden which usually falls upon them as the result of war. He stands for the reorganization of transportation facilities on the basis of service, declaring that coordination between the railroads and inland waterways is one of the needs of the hour. In addition to this he asks that free ports be established on the Panama canal and at Honolulu and Manila in order to facilitate the world commerce which will find its way to the Pacific following the war.
