

IN HUMANITY'S NAME

The appeal to America for relief for the outraged and starving people of Armenia and Syria is, without exception, the most heart-rending and urgent of any that has come to us since the war began.

We have been eager to do our part in giving for the welfare of our sons and brothers in the army, knowing that our best is but a beggarly sacrifice by comparison to theirs.

The appeal from Belgium is heart-rending, as we know because we have learned about it from reliable sources.

The situation in Armenia and Syria is worse, appallingly worse, by every comparison, and our information cannot be questioned.

Relief work devolves largely on American agencies and is being carried on with scrupulous conscience in every detail, but is pitifully insufficient.

It has been assigned to us to carry the appeal to the people of Lane County. It must be done with the greatest possible speed and must be met with the utmost generosity.

The Tragic Situation in Western Asia Calls for the Immediate Response of the Samaritan Spirit of the World

Reports regarding the atrocities, deportations and sufferings among the peoples of Western Asia have been so terrible as almost to challenge belief. They do stagger the imagination of those who were not eye witnesses.

Personal testimony of many who lived through the earlier period and information furnished by American Ambassadors, Consuls, teachers, physicians, missionaries and business men who have recently returned from Turkey to America confirm the worst. Documentary evidence of an overwhelming character is also abundant.

At a history making conference held recently in New York and participated in by 139 representatives of the above classes—the very people who know most about actual conditions in the afflicted territory—the following statements were unanimously agreed to as well within the facts:

At least 1,000,000 Armenians and Syrians in Turkey have perished during the past two years from massacre, deportation, exposure, starvation, disease.

Over 2,000,000 are now homeless and in dire distress.

Thousands of Greeks deported from the sea coast of Asia Minor are now in danger of starvation.

Four hundred thousand of those in need are orphans.

Little children scarcely able to feed themselves live absolutely alone in deserted homes. Seventy-five thousand children under 12 years of age are starving in Syria and the Lebanon district alone.

Sufferers in the Lebanon district recently were dying at the rate of 1,000 a day.

Five hundred thousand refugees have fled the Turkish dominions and in their temporary homes cry for help.

Relief is wisely and economically administered by absolutely reliable agents, but is pitifully insufficient.

Every dollar contributed goes for relief, none for expenses.

The RED CROSS Is Assisting to the Utmost of Its Ability. Every Humanitarian Agency In Christendom Indorses This Appeal

President Wilson Urges Help

In an appeal to the American people in which he urges further contributions to the relief of these stricken people, President Wilson says: "Reports indicate that of orphans alone there are more than 400,000, besides women and other dependent children, reaching a total of more than 2,000,000 destitute survivors. The situation is so distressing as to make a special appeal to the sympathies of all."

From Former Ambassador Oscar Strauss

"I am impressed with the increasing need as the winter comes on. The cold is severe through all the region of Asiatic Turkey north of Syria, and if these refugees are not aided by relief from America many more will perish."

From Consul Leslie A. Davis

"I believe there is no place in the world where there is greater and more urgent need of relief at the present time than among the surviving Christian population in the Turkish Empire.

"I speak from a personal knowledge of the situation, as during the past three years I have been located at Harpoot, and there was brought into close contact with the distress and misery of thousands of homeless and destitute women and children who are absolutely dependent upon charity for their subsistence.

"It is to be borne in mind that very few of these people have any way of earning money, as owing to the existing conditions there is no work to be obtained.

"The majority of these unfortunate women and children are now in such a wretched and helpless condition that they cannot long survive if help is not received. Many did die last winter for lack of food. Present conditions are more critical than ever.

"Arrangements have been made by which funds can continue to be sent there without any risk of loss."

From First Secretary Tarler

"There is no question as to the extreme need. The distress among the stricken people is beyond any power of words to describe. The American public can have absolute confidence that every dollar given is wisely and effectively used for the saving of life."

From Consul Recently Returned From Aleppo

"The only thing the matter with your statement is that it is not strong enough. The urgency of the demands are far beyond estimation. The 120,000 or so dependent persons in Aleppo and vicinity have no other resource for bread, and once the relief stops these people will disappear from the face of the earth. Disease is rife even among the permanent inhabitants, irrespective of race or religion, and the deported Christians will be in an absolutely hopeless condition without the funds that have been and must continue to be sent to them.

"The local relief distributing committee in Aleppo is very trustworthy and all funds forwarded there go to reliable men who are intensely interested in the work in every particular."

Many other consuls, ambassadors and travelers, speaking from personal knowledge, add their testimony to the great need and to the safety and integrity of the handling of relief work and funds.

INCIDENTS OF HUMAN SUFFERING THAT STIR THE SOUL

Child's Pitiful Appeal

"America did not realize the hunger that existed in some parts of Turkey. I can best illustrate it by telling you about a little boy who was brought to one of the hospitals. His condition was such that he could not eat solid food, but he cried for a piece of bread. When the physicians told him he could not eat bread he said he didn't want to eat it, he just wanted to put it under his pillow so that he could feel that food was near."

Men Devour Melon Rind

Perhaps a faint conception of the terrible hunger experienced by thousands may be gained from this little incident told by one of the returning consuls: "I was eating a piece of melon," he said, "and was paying little attention to the people around me. I tossed aside the rind, when instantly a man pounced upon it like a hungry wolf. He chewed on it for a few moments and then he in turn tossed it aside. Another man who had been watching him with the eyes of a hawk picked it up and devoured the rest."

Children Eat Dead Camel and Pick Grains From Dung of Animals in Streets.

An American doctor coming down the mountain side from the Lebanon noticed in the distance a throng of children and wondered why so many were gathered in one place. Upon coming near he discovered that a camel had died by the roadside and these famished children were in desperation picking the last shreds of flesh from the skeleton of the fallen beast. Children eagerly picking grains from the dung of animals in the street have become a common sight."

American Women Compelled to Deny Appeals of Children

Tender-hearted American women have been compelled to steel themselves against the sight of children in the street dying from lack of food—to pass by without helping, having no resources to warrant adding one more to the number already being fed.

Missionaries Select which Must Starve

A hard task is assigned the missionaries, that of practically signing the death sentence of children. For example, in one case there were 430 children with funds sufficient for only seventy. The missionaries were forced to select the seventy and say no to the equally or possibly more destitute 360.

I'm Hungry! I'm Hungry!

So far as Syria is concerned, Beirut, Palestine and the Lebanon have suffered most. Many villages have become depopulated. An American passing through a village last summer saw only one house open. The people had either migrated or perished. In one doorway sat a little girl, apparently alone in the world. She kept saying over and over, "I'm hungry! I'm hungry!" The children in all the villages look like old men and women.

Children Eat Grape Vines and Leaves

In Aleith no grapes are expected because the children have eaten the shoots and young leaves. The mulberry orchards were planted with wheat, but in many cases children have plucked the wheat to eat the seeds clinging to the roots.

Generosity of Americans

Those who have survived so far have been kept alive through the generosity of Americans. All money sent from America is received and the distribution of food is effective. In the coming winter the conditions will be harder than ever, and very few will survive unless adequate, regular contributions are sent.

What an American Saw

An American consular agent reports that in his daily walk from his house to the consulate he counted as many as twelve bodies of persons who had died of starvation the preceding night. Fifty-five per cent of the population of the Lebanon are reported dead from starvation, mal-nutrition and resultant diseases.

The scenes are indescribable. They can never be blotted from my memory. I stood beside a trench which was the grave of 2,000 victims. They, too, all surrendered their arms upon implicit promises that they would then be spared. The moment they became defenseless they were compelled at the point of the bayonet to dig the trench, into which they were forced and then hacked to pieces. Soldiers boasted of their work with axes, as being more economical than expensive cartridges!

Thousands of Christians have been driven from Armenia by the Kurds. To prevent their return, if by chance any survive the deportation, the Kurds have destroyed all their homes, even burning up the doors and windows, with their frames. All the fruit and nut trees and the vineyards were destroyed; and to make sure that there would be no wood for rebuilding, the trees were cut into lengths too short for boards. Even the terraces that held the fields on the mountain sides were broken down. The work of centuries of patient labor by a long suffering people has been completely overthrown.

Great as is the tragedy of massacre, a greater tragedy was the forced deportations, 100,000 women and children from one district alone. It is terrible to contemplate their fate after the war. The nations should provide means for searching out and restoring any survivors to their homes and loved ones.

The facts—terrible, gripping, heartbreaking facts—are here. The cry of anguish sobs through them from beginning to end. Let the utmost measure of devotion be swift and sure.

Every cent contributed goes wholly to relief work. All expenses are met by special contributions given expressly for that purpose.

Do not wait to be seen and asked to give. Do it now. The campaign must be carried to every heart and home, but you help carry it and thus make the work mutual.

Make all checks payable to F. N. McAlister, Treasurer. Bring or send all contributions to Armenian-Syrian Relief Committee, Chamber of Commerce, Eugene, Oregon. Phone 702.
