Outdoor World host shares tips for outdoor sports during winter

Host of the award-winning radio show Larry Whiteley shares his tips for staying warm and improving skills in the outdoors as temperatures drop

BY LARRY WHITELEY
For The Sentinel

Expect the Unexpected

This year has reminded me that there are no sure things in hunting. It makes it a challenge, but it's also why I enjoy it so much. Since mid-September I have pursued whitetails. Some afternoons, even the squirrels were scarce, but on others, 20 deer went by before darkness ended the hunting day. What amazes me is how many whitetails show up like clockwork, while others appear from nowhere at the least likely times.

I shot a few does for the freezer, but took home much more than venison this season. I saw spectacular sunsets, heard owls and crows calling, and admired male cardinals perched in nearby trees. I felt the chilling wind, stinging rain, and warm sun. These are the things that make it rewarding. Get outside and keep your eyes open—you never know when you'll encounter the unexpected.

Stay Warm in Your Deer Stand

In order to sit still among prime deer cover, a hunter must take extra steps to stay warm for the entire day. It's a good idea to bring extra layers in a daypack along with snacks and a small thermos filled with the hot liquid of your choice. A solid base layer system of polypropylene or Thermax long underwear is essential. Pair it with woolen shirts, pants, socks, and a jacket to provide good insulation. Don't forget to pack a quality hat; much of your body heat can escape through your head. Keep in mind that some hunters head back to camp around mid-morning or noon because they are cold or hungry. In the process, they may push deer your way. If you can avoid the temptation to get up and move to stay warm, you might be in the right spot at the right time.

Choose the Right Sporting Clays Shotgun

Thinking about busting some clays at your local range but don't know where to start? The first step is determining if you want to pursue sporting clays as a hobby or if you're approaching it as hunting practice. Then you'll want to select a gun to match. If you're shooting clays as a hobby of its own, you should use a sporting clays gun. Serious clay shooters arm themselves with specially designed shotguns—complete with ported barrels, optimized stock configurations and other features. Hunters looking to polish their waterfowl or upland abilities will want to shoot sporting clays with the shotgun they plan to use in the field. This will allow you to simulate hunting situations while becoming more comfortable with your gun. Ultimately, you have to decide which is more important, high scores at the range or a limit in the field.
