Cottage Grove Retrospective

A look back at a Sentinel story from 60 years ago

June 6, 1956

Large attendance observes Grove's Memorial Day Services, paying tribute to war dead

Jack Larson of Springfield, state American Legion commander, in the key talk emphasized the tradition of keeping America a great nation by not giving up the ship, a paraphrase of the famous words of Capt. James Lawrence as he lay dying on the deck of the USS Chesapeake a century and a half ago.

"Take heart by the words of Lawrence," Larson said. "The shit we must not give up is the American way of life."

Larson also stated that the world was striving to find a basis for peace and asked the question, "Must history repeat itself?"

He went on to say that veterans know war, the cost of liberty, the results of strife.

Larson hit hard at Communism, stating that veterans' organizations recognized the Communist threat even in the cradle days of 1919.

"We shall continue to fight the Communist influence as long as God gives us breath," he said.

Larson went on to mention four programs of veterans' organizations: Americanism, child welfare, rehabilitation of veterans and national security.

Honoring war dead, Larson said, "We hold in grateful memory the men who gave their lives that we might live. If America is to be a great nation, we must carry to our daily lives the devotion of Memorial Day. It is for us to prove they have not died in vein."

The ceremony was followed by the placing of the wreaths at the base of the cross by representatives of local Scout troops and veterans' organizations, followed by a prayer by Charles Whipps.

After the Armory program, a parade down Main street to the bridge was participated in by Scout organizations, the high school band, veterans' color guard, Company B, National Guard, and members of the American Legion.

At the bridge, a ceremony was held for the unknown dead at sea, opened with a prayer by the Rev. Cleveland. While the band played the famous Anchors Aweigh, Girl Scouts scattered flowers on the waters, followed by the sound of the National Guard firing squad and the playing of Taps by Lyle Chaffee.

At the cemetery, a similiary service was conducted at the tomb of the unknown soldier, by Lane County Coiture, 40 et 8, with Whipps in charge, and wreaths were laid at the foot of the tomb by the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary.

Old paint, household cleaners, lawn and garden chemicals, car care products and other household hazardous waste will be accepted. There is a limit of no more than 35 gallons of waste from each household.

Fats, Oils and Grease

Earlier this spring, City Utilities employees Larry Carlton and Jeff Violette attended the Western States Alliance, FOG Forum Workshop in Bend. FOG is an acronym for Fats, Oils, and Grease, and the purpose of this forum was to discuss planning for successful and cost-effective FOG capture, treatment and reuse options. There were presentations on the sizing of grease interceptors, building code issues, proper grease interceptor maintenance, and FOG impacts to surface and storm-water systems.

The City said FOGs are a significant issue for the City Utilities crew, as they can cause problems with the wastewater collection system. Restaurants use very hot water to clean and sanitize dishes. This very hot water places FOGs in suspension when they first enter the wastewater collection system, but as they cool further down the sewer mains, they solidify and can cause plugs and back-ups in the main sewer lines. The only way to alleviate this problem is with properly installed and maintained grease interceptors, which must also be regularly cleaned to be effective. The City Utilities crew works closely with local restaurants to inspect grease interceptors and educate business owners about proper grease interceptor maintenance.
