Firefighters battle summer's first blaze north of Sisters

rews with the Oregon Department of Forestry reported a "great day on the fireline" in their efforts to contain the Akawana fire, a lightning-caused blaze that started Tuesday, June 7 about 13 miles north of Sisters.

As of the end of Sunday, the fire was burning 2094 acres but was described as 80 percent contained. A total of 537 personnel, including 21 hand crews, 16 fire engines, five bulldozers, 11 water tenders and six helicopters fought the fire on Sunday.

"Firefighters continued aggressive mop-up, making sure that this fire will not reignite and flare up later this summer," according to a DOF press release, which added that "no additional growth has occurred in the last operational period."

Firefighters expected a warming trend and stronger winds Monday that may pose a mild test to containment lines.
