

TERRY FOX MARATHON OF HOPE

The Man Who Tried to Outrun Cancer

Terry Fox, a Canadian athlete, was struck with bone cancer before he turned 20. Even though part of one leg was amputated, Terry turned a love of running into a challenge to raise money to fight cancer. His goal was to run across the entire country of Canada.

He called his journey the Marathon of Hope.

Sadly, Terry had to end his run after 143 days and 5,373 kilometers (3,339 miles). His cancer had spread to his lungs and he could no longer run. Terry passed away a few months later.

But his effort to raise money for cancer research has lived on.

More than $700 million has been raised worldwide to date through the annual Terry Fox Run which is held every September in communities around the world.

Good Manners at Home

Good table manners were expected at the Fox home. Use the pictures to complete three important table manners Terry learned growing up. (Some of the pictures would make really silly rules.)

Eat with your _____ and _____.
 Keep _____ off the table
 No _____ at the table

Small Fry Overcomes with Big Try

Replace these missing words.

As a child, Terry loved sports. He especially loved basketball. But in middle school, he was _____ than a lot of the team players. And his _____ were not very good either.

On days he was feeling sick, he forced himself out of the door and _____ to school.

By tenth grade, Terry's hard work paid off. He earned a place on the school basketball team!

Terry said: "Anything is possible if you try!"

Even though the _____ suggested he try wrestling, Terry was determined to _____ basketball for the school team. He practiced every day during the summer. When school started he went early to school to _____. His parents didn't want him to go to school so early, so he would _____ until the last moment and then run all the way to school — even running in the dark in winter.

Extra! Extra!

For the Benefit of Others

What made Terry Fox great is not only what he accomplished for himself, but what he made possible for other people. Search the newspaper to identify individuals who are working to make life better for other people. Name the individuals and then summarize their actions and the possible benefits to others.
