

A day of ribbon cuttings for new businesses in CG

The Cottage Grove Chamber of Commerce helps to welcome two new businesses to town late last week--sort of. South Lane Mental Health has been in the community for decades but celebrated the opening of a new facility and Emerald Fitness was welcomed to the business community at its Gateway Blvd. location. Several city and chamber officials came out for the ribbon cuttings including chamber director Travis Palmer, members Jessica Baker and Rhonda Woorley and Cottage Grove City Councilman Kenneth Roberts.

Planned Parenthood set to re-open in Cottage Grove

Cottage Grove residents seeking services from the local Planned Parenthood were being met with a shuttered door. A previously planned retooling of the office was responsible for the closure and now that the new schedule, staff and list of services is set, that door is ready to swing open again.

On June 6, the Cottage Grove location is expected to open again with a change in services that is expected to be announced early next week.

Tiny home update

And under the terms of its grant, must have the project completed by the end of 2018.

The group noted that it is currently working on obtaining several grants from different organizations as well as governmental entities ranging from $3,000 to $60,000.

A fundraising campaign is set to be launched this summer with the group working to raise the money needed to build the homes and complete any renovation work required by the city should Cottage Village be approved by the planning department.

The group did note that a sign is expected to be placed at the property shortly reading, "Future home of Cottage Village."
