YAC honored by city council

we're classified as a private entity and there's grants we can't get," Beer said.

Pay it Forward allows for residents to request certain items and the group keeps a list of needs. When the item is donated, Beer and her staff of volunteers alerts individuals on the list that they have been matched with an item.

"We have lists for everything but the biggest list is for baby items and furniture," she said.

While the group allows pick-ups every two weeks, it makes exceptions.

"If someone needs formula, and we give away a lot of formula, they can come anytime and get it and I'll run it out to them," she said.

The group gets so many donations that it holds "free days."

"Everything is free but on those days people can come and take as much as they want, they don't have to sign up," Beer said.

However, those days may be coming to an end with Beer saying, "We may have to shut down. We don't want to but we need a bigger space to operate out of."

Members of the Youth Advisory Council (YAC) were honored by Cottage Grove Mayor Jeff Gowling and the city council on June 12 for their work in tobacco prevention and the role they played in moving House Bill 3030 through the Oregon State Legislature.
