News from the state legislature and around Oregon

The forecast now predicts clouds for August 21, dashing the dreams of the million people scheduled to invade Oregon for the solar eclipse.

Schools reportedly will continue to cut staff and days around the state despite the large education package passed by the state legislature.

A recent study at Oregon Research Institute (ORI) shows that rates of electronic cigarette (e-cigarette) use among Oregon 8th and 9th graders is higher than national average.

Wildfires continue to burn in the state with the fire in Central Oregon slowed slightly by rain over the weekend. Air quality continues to hover near unhealthy levels.

North Korea has walked back threats to attack U.S. Guam this week saying that it will follow through with its plan only if, "Yankees persist in their dangerous, reckless actions."

Racial tensions continue to mount after a white supremacy rally took place last weekend and ended with the death of 32 year old Heather Heyes after she was run down by a car that drove into the crowd. Counter protests took place across the country with protesters in North Carolina toppling a confederate statue.

Texas A&M canceled a planned white nationalist rally after the events in Charlottesville, Virginia.
