News from around the state and the nation

From around the state

Oregon University's football team suffered a setback last week when Justin Herbert broke his collarbone during a game on Sunday, October 1.

The state's new law banning cell phone use of any kind while driving went into effect on October 1. The law prohibits the use of cell phones for any purpose without a hands-free device and closes a loophole that allowed residents to scroll through social media or check their email.

A jury ruled that a Eugene hospital must pay the mother of a student at the University of Oregon who died from meningococcal disease, citing negligent medical care.

The father of Stephen Paddock, the man responsible for killing at least 58 and injuring more than 500 during a mass shooting in Las Vegas on October 1, was wanted by the FBI and captured in Oregon more than 30 years ago.

From around the nation

The University of Southern California was placed on lockdown after reports of gunfire on Monday, October 2. Law enforcement reported no sign of an active shooter.

Stephen Paddock is accused of killed at least 58 and injuring more than 500 before killing himself in a Las Vegas hotel room. Officials reported what is being described as the deadliest mass shooting in U.S. history on October 1. Paddock allegedly had more than a dozen assault weapons in a room on the 32nd floor of the Mandalay Bay when he opened fire on a country music concert with more than 20,000 in attendance.

Much of Puerto Rico is still without power after Hurricane Maria swept through the area more than two weeks ago leaving many residents without food or clean drinking water.

Facebook reports that more than 10 million Americans saw Russian-purchased election ads on its site during the 2016 campaign.

In new documents released to federal investigators, it was revealed that President Donald Trump had previously undisclosed contact with Russian officials during the 2016 election campaign.
