MACAULEY

they can believe in themselves, they have the ability to achieve. This has been something that has always been engrained in Macauley.

"My mom instilled that early in my life. You never say you can't. Can't was not a word. And then honestly, honestly, when my daughter passed away, I really just wanted to lay down. And one of the things that my daughter, with as much wisdom as she had in her 18 years, was that she said, 'Mom you never give up.'"

Macauley's daughter, Summer Solesbee, died in a car crash on her way to church during her senior year at Cottage Grove High School in 2003.

"And she was training. She could out bench me, oh my gosh. She weighed like 105 pounds and could bench 135 raw. And she was only 4-foot-11. She was amazing," said Maccauley.

"It took a few years for me to step out. And I'm so thankful because I heard her words say to me, 'you can do anything.' And then I honestly, I give God the glory. He's my higher power. And I also give my family genetics, my Scottish blood. I'm a warrior."

With her warrior spirit guiding the way, Macauley then continued to teach her classes, began to get into weightlifting more seriously and more than anything else, wanted to build up all those people around her.

"What drives me is that everyday I wake up and my eyes are open and I'm breathing. That's what drives me. There's something that I can be happy about."

BIKING

"That event that happened, that was one of my former students actually. I was really devastated by that," said Watt who teaches gardening at Lincoln Middle School. "It was awful. Couldn't have happened to a more wonderful kid. He really was amazing."

Doug Lyda, a firefighter for South Lane Fire and Rescue

(SLFR), attended the meeting not because he is interested in biking but because he is working to raise money to give bike lights to students around South Lane. Lyda's goal for SLFR is to raise $15,000 and the group has already raised $6,000. The lights that they would be giving out are LED lights that are USB rechargeable and going to be around $60 each.

In addition to bike safety, the group is also focused on being present in the community. One way this has manifested itself is that the group received funding from the city for a bike maintenance station that will be installed on the Row River Trail. It has not been decided where or when this installation will take place.

Warriors, Elks, and Eagle named to all-league team

By Zach Silva

The conclusion of the OSAA 1A tournament meant the release of the Skyline girls' all-league basketball teams. Voted on at the league tournament, it was no-surprise as Days Creek (5), North Douglas (5) and Elkton (4) filled with their players.

North Douglas' Riley Black and Abby Whipple and Elkton's Hannah Maxwell and Kieryn Carnes were all named to the first team. Maxwell was all named to the all-defensive team.

Receiving second team honors included Nicki Derrick from North Douglas and Yoncalla's Shaunasi Hardy. The honorable mention featured Elkton's Allison Swearingen and Alexis Halstead and Payton Black and Sofia Alcantar from North Douglas.

Days Creek's Moriah Michaels was both player of the year and defensive player of the year.

Cottage Grove chess takes sixth

The Lions compete against Junction City last weekend.

By Steve Kliston

The Cottage Grove High School varsity chess team finished its season last weekend at the Oregon High School Chess Team Championship tournament held at Willamette High School in Eugene. The 14 schools playing there represented the top high school chess teams in the state. Participants included at least four masters and experts (players ranked

Coached by Steve Kliston and Taylor Wilhour, the Lions' squad entered the tournament with the lowest ratings average among the 14 teams, but with some excellent play managed to capture 6th place overall by winning two matches (against Marist and Junction City) and tying one (against Coquille), out of the team's total of five matches.

At first board was Alex Reimann, second board was shared by Spencer Falk and Zeak Bray, third board was shared by Zeak and Aliano Underwood, fourth board was shared by Aliano and Maren Bartlog and fifth board was shared by Taylor Henry and Enzo Valdez. Maren Bartlog is to be congratulated for winning four of her five games at the tournament.
