

Snapshots: Tri at the Grove

Left: Professional triathletes compete in a challenge between events including trying to catch an Oreo cookie in your mouth after it is placed on your forehead. A competitor celebrates getting it on his first try. Center: A young participant is cheered on as he makes his way out of the water. Right: A group of paddlers compete in the paddle tri that substitutes the swimming portion with a kayak or paddle boarding portion.

Warm weather angling tips

With the Umpqua River water temperature at 79 degrees all week near Elkton, anglers are encouraged to practice hot weather ethical angling.

- Fish during the cooler early mornings or evenings.
 - Land your fish quickly to help increase survival rates.
 - Keep your fish in at least six inches of water while releasing it.
 - Revive the fish before release. Keep the fish upright facing into the current, and if the current is slow, move the fish back and forth slowly to help oxygenate the gills.
 - Avoid angling in areas where fish are vulnerable while they are seeking cooler water.
- Our hot weather is expected to continue.
