MONEY from A1

business model that has been in place, how funds are allocated and how to interpret the internal reports they have received,” Oase said in the statement.

A financial statement posted to the Special Olympics website showed $50,457.58 in the local account as of Jan. 31, 2017.

At the time, The Sentinel requested an accounting of how the local program’s $50,000 gift has been spent. Between 2012 and 2017, documents show approximately $36,000 spent, with half of the funds going towards lodging which was traditionally reimbursed by Special Olympics. However, those funds had not been reimbursed to the local program.

Special Olympics Oregon Senior Director of Marketing and Communications, Chad Carter said the new agreement was amicable and directed questions to a statement released on the organization’s website written by Oase which noted she and director of program and coach services Joe Harvey traveled to Cottage Grove to meet with the local team. “(We) discussed opportunities and identified how we can move forward together,” the statement read in part.

It noted that Special Olympics Oregon was “excited” to have resolved the issue and printed a statement from Dowell.

“I am so pleased that we have come to an agreement regarding Michelle Portmann’s gracious gift to our local program with Special Olympics,” Dowell’s statement, an email sent to Special Olympics Oregon, read. “Her legacy will continue to live on and help the athletes she loved. I know it’s not the current SOOR employees who created this situation and am very grateful that you met with us and showed us that you deeply care about this issue and resolving it. On behalf of my athletes and coaches, thank you.”
