Snowmageddon Continues For Many

With snow storms, such as the one we just experienced, we come to realize just how important electricity is to our everyday lives. Cars stranded in the driveway, shrubs and trees damaged, refrigerators beginning to warm, freezers beginning to thaw, and for many; no hot water or even heat in the house! And then, at a time we need the evening news the most, the power, and the TV, go out.

South Lane Television knows that when power interruptions occur, that is when we are needed the most. You need to know what is happening and what to further expect from a storm such as we just experienced -- and what may lie ahead in the following hours and days.

Some years ago, SLTV invested in a large generator to continue broadcasting the television channels and radio stations when our EPUD power is disrupted. In such an outage, the generator is able run for about four days before it needs fuel. The recent storm was so bad that fuel replenishment was initially impossible causing the system to go dark for about a day, once the stored diesel was depleted. At that point we were at the mercy of the bad road and the inability to get more fuel to the generator.

Usually power outages are brief, but as we have just seen, they can last several days. And as this column is written, and after 10+ days, the power has still not been restored to our Hansen Butte communications site. Thanks to the generator, TV and radio outages were minimal. Our goal at SLTV is for continuous television service to our viewers, the bulk of whom live in Cottage Grove and are Pacific Power customers who may have electricity when our EPUD power is down.

Please remember that sometimes during a storm, your favorite station may go off the air due to problems at their transmitting site in Eugene or wherever. We can only rebroadcast signals we can receive. So if our generator is supplying power to a translator channel but the parent station is off the air, well, it will not be receivable on your TV until the station is able to restore the signal.

We want to be there when you need us the most.

Happy viewing,
Lloyd Williams, President
