Alice Bryan Noel Heiney 1918 - 2019

Alice Noel Heiney passed away Thursday, May 23rd at the age of 101, surrounded by family and friends at Sacred Heart Medical Center Riverbend in Springfield, OR.

Born January 2nd, 1918, to Harvey and Bessie Jones Bryan on their homestead in Bacca County, Colorado. She was delivered by her oldest sister and father and was the youngest of 11 children.

Alice graduated from Springfield High School in Springfield, Colorado. She worked at the Remington Arms Ammunition Factory in Denver, Colorado during WWII, inspecting bullets. She was a member of Rosie the Riveters and went with other members to local high schools to talk about their time as Riveters.

She met her first husband,

Edward Noel, working in the food service industry in Pomona, California in 1947. After marrying and working together in three states, they moved to Oregon in 1960. Their last restaurant was the Seven Gables Inn in Cottage Grove, OR, which they sold in 1975. She worked over 50 years as a waitress. After retiring, she and her husband worked for Fay Stewart as caretakers. Edward Noel passed away in 1984.

She married Russell Heiney in 1987, who passed away in 2001.

Alice had a deep faith in God through out her life. She knew suffering in others and herself, knew life and death like no other and was quiet in her suffering and care giving. She believed that laughter is what keep her alive for 101 years.

Survivors include two children Dr. Marshall Noel and Carroll Noel, 11 grandchildren, 13 great grandchildren and 3 great-great grandchildren. Her oldest child, Alice Elaine Noel Kitcher, preceded her in death.

The memorial service will be at 3:00 pm on June 29th at the Living Faith Assembly, 467 S. 10th St., Cottage Grove Oregon 97424.

Warren Dale McGuire 1921—2019

In the early hours of Monday, June 10 a single bugle stirred through the valley air—playing the gentle, nearly imperceptible strains of 'taps.'

Warren Dale McGuire came into this world on a mid-September morning in 1921. A Depression Era farm boy and the tenth of thirteen children, his life would not be without its challenges or its rewards. Early years in Kansas were spent tending farm animals, busting clods behind his father's horse-drawn plow, and later guiding that same implement through hundreds of acres of farmland. It was in such a time and place as this that he grew to respect the value of hard work, honesty and family.

Dale excelled in football in high school and was recruited to play for Fort Scott Junior College. Likable and a competent student, he was also a fierce competitor and had immediate success both on and off the field. While as a youngster he had managed to escape the scourges of polio, smallpox, typhoid and the like, he would not survive his time at college without succumbing to a more compelling attraction—the woman who, within a year, would become his wife, Fran Ault—in his words, a good-looking sassy brunette.

The two were married on the 5th of September 1941. Three days later they set off on a 1500 mile, five day journey to Cottage Grove, riding in the back of a small trailer, to a place they had never seen. They arrived in Oregon with just 6 cents to their names, but with high hopes for a brighter future. Three and a half months later, however, Pearl Harbor would transform their lives.

Dale enlisted in the Marine Corps and was in the first wave to hit the beaches of Okinawa. Sixty days later he was badly wounded when a misdirected naval phosphorous round landed on his position. Miraculously he survived and spent the rest of the war—and then some—11 months in all—in burn treatment centers.

The seventy-four years which followed Okinawa were a gift. A Glorious Gift. That he had survived the blast, let alone the ordeal which followed, had been something well beyond luck.

Home once again, Dale began where he had left off, working in the timber industry—for Woodard Lumber and Weyerhaeuser as a millwright, and later at Kimwood Machine as a Production Supervisor. During those years he helped to guide the paths of his children, and later his grandchildren—threw a line into whatever stream rolled by his window—hunted when the opportunity arose—delighted in Oregon sports, and visited often with siblings and family who were strung out from Kansas to the Pacific. After retirement he became a veritable master of the vegetable garden, always quick to share his bounty with friends and neighbors.

It serves as no small comment on his nature that, together with his wife, he devised a plan which, along with the couple's adult children, provided Christmas—not for each other—but for strangers—area children and their less fortunate families. Of the success of this endeavor, he could not have been more pleased.

Though he is gone now, in my mind's eye, I can still see him—when the evening light hangs low, sparkling through the Norway maple—having watered his garden and mowed his lawn—relaxing with my mother on their patio, sipping iced tea, chatting, and considering what wonderful things tomorrow might bring. May he find the peace he deserves. As for those who remain, we have been fortunate that he has walked beside us, taken our hand and touched our lives.

Dale is survived by Fran McGuire, his wife of 77 years (Cottage Grove)—four children; Warren McGuire, Jr. (and Betty of Cottage Grove), Dean McGuire (and Vivian of Eugene), Diana Bell (and Steve of Cottage Grove), and Judy Roberts (and Scot of Sherwood)—and also 11 grandchildren, 18 great grandchildren, and 1 great-great grandchild.

He was preceded in death by all 12 of his siblings and an infant daughter, Sharon Kay.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, June 22, 2019 at 11:00 AM at Smith-Lund-Mills Funeral Chapel, Cottage Grove, OR. An Inurnment following at Fir Grove Cemetery, Cottage Grove, OR with military honors.

POLICE LOG

June 9

- A male subject was observed waving a black handgun around on Gateway Blvd., though "he was not menacing or pointing the firearm at anyone."

- A subject was reported in his own backyard screaming and yelling. The complainant did not know if the subject was injured, angry or on drugs. Upon contact, it was determined the subject was doing yard work.

CLARIFICATION

In the Cottage Grove Sentinel article "Farmers Market: Planting seeds for prosperity," (May 29) about the South Valley Farmers Market, it was implied that the nonprofit insures individual vendors. Individual vendors are, in fact, responsible for their own insurance coverage. The Sentinel apologizes for any misunderstanding.
