Home Fire Risks Increase As Weather Cools

(NAPS)—The fall and winter seasons bring cooler temperatures, holidays, and images of cozy nights by the fireplace. Yet the change in seasons also comes with the chance of severe weather and an increase in fire risks. According to the U.S. Fire Administration, more home fires occur in winter than in any other season.

"Holiday decorations, space heaters, generators, and fireplaces all present fire hazards if not properly used and maintained," said Steve Hirsch, chair of the National Volunteer Fire Council. "Residents should be aware of the dangers and take the steps to make sure their families and homes are protected."

Follow these tips to minimize home fire and safety risks:

- Install smoke alarms in every sleeping room, outside each separate sleeping area, and on every level of the home. Test monthly to ensure they work.
- Install carbon monoxide alarms and test them at least once a month.
- Know where the gas, electric, and water main shut-off controls are and how to use them.
- Place fire extinguishers in the kitchen, garage, and living room, and make sure all household members know how to use them.
- Develop a home fire escape plan and practice it with the entire family.
- Keep portable generators outside and away from the home.

If public notices aren't in the newspaper, how will the public notice?
Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals. These are just a few ways government actions can affect your life and community. 80% of all Oregon adults read a newspaper at least once during an average week, and 54% read public notices printed there.* But federal, state, and local government agencies erroneously believe they can save money by putting public notices on their web sites instead. If that happens, how will public notices be ... well, noticed? Less than 10% of the U.S. population currently visits a government web site daily. You should not have to know where, when, and how to look, or what to look for, in order to be informed. It is the government's responsibility to deliver notice to the public.

Take notice.
Your right to know is being served right here: in your newspaper.
