True or False?

When we at Kid Scoop come across stories such as this one about a jellyfish as large as a person, we wonder if it's true or not. Today, even photographs can be changed.

We checked this story out to make sure it was true. To do that, we checked three separate sources.

Sources for this report are Snopes.com (a fact-checking website), LiveScience.com and Smithsonian.com. All are respected sites that confirmed the story is true.

Anytime you read something that seems too wild to be true, check at least three respected sources to see if they are reporting the same information.

Does the barrel jelly really eat with its arms?

The barrel jellyfish has many tiny mouths on the poofy cauliflower-like parts of its arms.

They don't eat fish. They eat very small zooplankton (tiny animal plankton) that they catch on these arms. Like all jellies, the pulsing of their bells helps to swirl plankton into their arms where they will sting their prey and eat it through the tiny mouths.

Extra! Extra! Jellyfish Adjectives

The barrel jellyfish and lion's mane jellyfish on today's page got their names because of the way they look. Explore the newspaper for adjectives that can be used to describe jellyfish. Can you come up with some new jellyfish names?

Do barrel jellyfish sting?

They do sting their tiny prey. But, because their prey is so tiny, their sting is not very strong. A person who touches their arms would get a mild sting. The sting of the barrel jellyfish is not normally harmful to humans. If you find any jellyfish on a beach, it's best not to handle it as they can still sting when dead.
