Home For The Holidays
 (NAPS)—With today's technology, staying in touch with loved ones around the country—and the world—is easier than it's ever been. We are connected to each other virtually day and night—from cell phones and video calls to social media, texting and e-mail. While we may rely on this technological closeness throughout the year, the holidays offer a unique opportunity to sit and spend time with family members, particularly older family members, whom we don't see on a regular basis. This face-to-face time provides a chance to connect, catch up, and observe behaviors that may go undetected over the phone or through e-mail. Certain changes in these behaviors from year to year may indicate a need for long-term care.

While each passing year will show some changes in an older family member's capabilities and function, the list below provides common changes in behavior to watch for to get a better idea of where your loved ones stand functionally. It's important not to focus on the behavior itself, but rather the change in that behavior compared to what is considered normal for that person. For example, someone who has always been quiet and somewhat introverted would be held to a different standard than someone who is usually very outgoing and conversational, but now seems withdrawn and isolated. Based on the information you gather, it may be time to start thinking about your family's plan for long-term care.

The time to plan is now
 Millions of Americans require long-term care at some point during their lifetime. This type of care includes assistance with everyday activities, like bathing, dressing and eating, or supervision due to a severe cognitive impairment, like Alzheimer's disease. Surprisingly, the type of care needed to provide assistance with these activities can be expensive and is generally not covered by traditional health plans or Medicare. In many cases, taking care of an older relative often falls on family members or friends. However, depending on the location of family members and friends, this support is often not available or may be a bigger challenge than many expect or are willing to take on.

Take a closer look
 By paying attention to some common behaviors, you can begin to determine whether a loved one is having difficulty performing everyday activities. Noticing changes in behavior that may be due to an emerging physical or cognitive impairment is an important first step. Based on what you observe, the Federal Long Term Care Insurance Program (FLTCIP) may be worth considering when developing your family's plan for long-term care.

Cleanliness of the home:
 Is there clutter in the hallways, stacked mail, uncleaned dishes, etc.?
Social interaction:
 Are they engaged with friends and family, getting out and about, and continuing social interaction at their normal level?
Personal hygiene and care:
 Are activities like regular bathing, laundry, grooming, etc., taking place?
Level of independence:

If public notices aren't in the newspaper, how will the public notice?

Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals. These are just a few ways government actions can affect your life and community.
 80% of all Oregon adults read a newspaper at least once during an average week, and 54% read public notices printed there.*
 But federal, state, and local government agencies erroneously believe they can save money by putting public notices on their web sites instead. If that happens, how will public notices be ... well, noticed? Less than 10% of the U.S. population currently visits a government web site daily.
 You should not have to know where, when, and how to look, or what to look for, in order to be informed. It is the government's responsibility to deliver notice to the public.

Take notice.
 Your right to know is being served right here: in your newspaper.

* American Opinion Research, Princeton NJ, September 2010.  U.S. Census Bureau, May 2009.

The next time you visit older relatives, take a good look at their lifestyle to determine whether they need help to stay healthy and independent.

Has the level of reliance on a spouse or guest for various things increased (e.g., getting a glass of water, answering the phone or doorbell, etc.)?
Financial health:
 Are bills piling up, being paid on time, etc.?
Mental sharpness:
 Is your loved one participating in conversations, staying up-to-date with the news or favorite sports team, etc.?
Nutritional balance:
 Maintaining normal eating habits, food within "best by" ranges, cupboards stocked, etc.?
 How did you answer?
Mostly unchanged
 The best time for you and your family members to consider long-term care insurance is long before it's needed. Because the FLTCIP is medically underwritten, it's important to apply while you're still in good health to avoid the risk that a future illness or medical condition may prevent you from obtaining coverage later. Also, premiums are directly related to age. This means that premiums tend to be lower for younger applicants.

Recognized changes
 If you're already a FLTCIP enrollee and recognize some of these behavioral changes in a loved one, contact a FLTCIP care coordinator at the phone number provided below to gather important information about the different care options that may be available. A call to one of their licensed health care practitioners can provide valuable information such as an assessment of need, direction on developing a plan for long-term care services, and access to discounted services and providers, where available. The FLTCIP, unlike most long-term care insurance plans, provides certain care coordination services to qualified relatives of enrollees at no cost.

FLTCIP eligibility
 Many members of the federal family are eligible to apply for coverage under the FLTCIP, including federal and U.S. Postal Service employees and annuitants, as well as active and retired members of the uniformed services. Qualified relatives such as spouses, domestic partners, parents and parents-in-law, and adult children are also eligible to apply. For a complete eligibility list, visit www.LTCFEDS.com/eligibility.

To learn more about the FLTCIP, visit www.LTCFEDS.com. For personalized assistance, call 1-800-LTC-FEDS (1-800-582-3337) / TTY 1-800-843-3557 to speak with a program consultant. Consultants are available to answer any questions you may have and can walk you step by step through the plan design and application process.
