

Hult Center hosting 'Stay Home Talent Show'

The Hult Center for the Performing Arts is seeking submissions for the first (and hopefully last) "Stay Home Talent Show" and are encouraging all performers including musicians, actors, singers, dancers, comedians and more to submit a video no longer than three minutes for consideration. Finalists will then be announced on April 13, followed by a People's Choice run-off. Prizes will be awarded to finalists and the People's Choice winner. This contest is open to all and we encourage artists both fresh and seasoned to get involved to help bring communities together through performance art during such isolated times.

There are no age restrictions, but participants under 13-years of age must have permission from guardians to participate. The Hult Center is encouraging any performers who have been affected by the recent event ban to participate so the arts community can celebrate their hard work and talent. The center is also encouraging participants to get creative and find ways to collaborate while maintaining all CDC safe distancing protocols. That said, this is the arts so extra points will be awarded for creativity, flair and style. Rules:

• Clips can be submitted for consideration on Hult Center social media pages by including the hashtag #HultTalentShow between now and April 10 at <https://www.hultcenter.org/stayhometalentshow.htm>.

• Clips must be no longer than three minutes in length. Use of copyrighted or protected materials is prohibited, so no lip syncing over other artists work allowed. Judging:

• Submissions will be reviewed by a panel of local judges including media, local producing companies as well as other local performers. Judges will review submissions and, on April 13, will announce the finalists who will then have their content shared for a People's Choice finale with voting.

Schools from AI

2020, the decision was made based on the fast-paced recent developments

regarding COVID-19 and ever-growing data suggesting a more prolonged shutdown to combat the virus. "Our state's response to COVID-19 has responsibly and necessarily evolved with the use of data and knowledge of effective suppression measures," Gill said in the message from ODE. "We now have a moral imperative to meet the changing nature of the pandemic and evolve our approach to serving our children. "As we continue the effective measures of Governor Brown's 'Stay Home, Save Lives' order, we also foresee the strong possibility that our students may not come back through our school house doors this academic year. This calls for a shift from providing supplementary education to a formidable effort to provide Distance Learning for All." SLSD staff thus began work on Tues., Mar. 31 coordinating a plan to offer continued learning for all students in spite of local schools shuttering their doors. "On April 13, your student(s) will receive learning in a new way," Curtis wrote. "We are excited about the possibilities that will emerge as staff engage in professional development and learn how to design and deliver Distance Learning for every student."

Despite the turmoil and in the face of nationwide business and school closures, Curtis began the letter by reiterating SLSD's commitment to maintaining communication with all students to ensure their continued education.

"Please know that in the last two weeks, our staff has been planning for a reconnection with our students," Curtis wrote. "Yesterday, our staff returned to work with a goal to reach every student and family by phone. It is important for us to know how our students are doing during this time of isolation."

SLSD staff made the calls to make sure that each district student has enough food, to check how each family is doing, to gauge the need of mental health supports in an emotionally trying time and to learn about students' access to internet-capable devices and Wi-Fi.

CORONAVIRUS HELPFUL TIPS FROM THE CDC

manage stress

Try to keep up with regular routines. If schools are closed, create a schedule for learning activities and relaxing or fun activities.
