Safe Routes, Fillmore outfall projects continue

Part of the Wildish Construction crew concentrated doing finish work in and around the water quality swale such as installing the sedimentation manhole upstream of the swale and access road and parking area around the swale.

This week this crew will be bringing the 27-inch storm drainage line towards Fillmore Avenue.

Street excavation continued last week on South Fourth Street near Fillmore Avenue and Triangle Park. After the street excavation near the school entrance was completed, it was determined two more trees will need to be removed on the school property.

A water service line was hit near Triangle Park and city crews repaired it. Street excavation hit a bell section of the sanitary sewer pipe. Wildish ordered a part and will repair this section. Wildish crews planned to finish street excavation around the park and the bus barn this week.

Crews are next laying the main water line from Grant Avenue toward Fillmore Avenue. Local residents can expect some inconveniences and are asked to proceed with care.

Crews will later begin laying sanitary sewer line and new sanitary sewer laterals to the residents from Fillmore south toward Grant.

Staff continues to talk with residents in the construction area about various issues and with utility companies to ensure their work will not delay the progress of the contractor and the contractor to keep the project moving ahead.

Northwest Natural Gas will continue to be working on relocating/upgrading their facilities.

Latest OHA modeling suggests marked rise in COVID-19 transmission

New modeling of the COVID-19 virus shows that COVID-19 is spreading more rapidly in Oregon, according to the latest model released today by the Oregon Health Authority and the Institute for Disease Modeling.

The modeling assumes that hospitalizations from COVID-19 remain stable and testing remains at its present level of approximately 4,000 a day.

The optimistic scenario with those assumptions suggests the previous modeling increase of June 11 was the result of higher testing and that case counts would remain stable at about 180 per day over the next month. This is the least likely scenario to occur because it assumes diagnosis of all new cases and presently about one-third of new infections cannot be traced to a known source.

The moderate scenario suggests the rise in cases in the last modeling report was due to increased transmission and expanded testing — and that daily infections of COVID-19 could rise over the next month to more than 900 per day, with daily hospitalizations rising from 8 to 27.

The most pessimistic scenario suggests the rise in cases in the last modeling report was due entirely to increased transmission and not expanded testing — and that infections could rise to more than 4,800, and hospitalizations could increase to 82 per day.

communities," said Dean Sidelinger, MD, Oregon state health officer. "This latest model provides us with a sobering reminder that we all need to guard against continued spread, especially as we continue to reopen and the weather gets warmer."

Dr. Sidelinger said, "Think hard about your choice of activities, especially as we get close to the Fourth of July holiday. Ask yourself: how can I reduce my risk and the risk I might pose to people around me?"

He urges people to do what they can to suppress the virus by staying 6 feet away from other people, wearing a mask, avoiding large gatherings and, if you are in a group setting — like a holiday barbeque — stay outside, keep your distance and use a face covering when you're not eating.

Lastly, wash your hands frequently and stay home if you're sick.
