

State Search & Rescue has message for winter travelers: 'Know before you go'

Winter weather is here, and Oregon Office of Emergency Management State Search Rescue Coordinator Scott Lucas says Oregon is seeing an uptick in lost or stranded travelers on foot and in vehicles.

Lucas says he wants to remind Oregonians and visitors of ways to stay safe. In addition, the search and rescue community in Oregon stands ready to respond when needed, but that being safe and prepared should always be the priority. That means having food, water, maps and other items needed for comfort and safety in the event you get lost or stranded.

Lane Education seeks driver education instructors

Lane Education Service District is in need of individuals interested in becoming Oregon Department of Transportation Certified Driving Instructors. Those interested in becoming a certified trainer may visit online at trivou.org/projects/tse for more information.

season to look for a tree,” Emergency Management says Lucas. “Careless Search and Rescue program supports a broad spectrum of search and rescue operations in Oregon. That mission includes coordinating activities of state and federal agencies involved in search and rescue, liaising with the Oregon State Sheriffs’ Association and other organizations, and providing on-scene search and rescue coordination when requested.

The coordinator recommends not relying on GPS alone and using resources for Oregon travel like tripcheck.com or calling 511 for road conditions.
