

Elkton launches holiday 'shop local' events

The town of Elkton is putting out the welcome mat this Thanksgiving weekend with its 11th annual Art and Wine Tour from Nov. 26 to 28, 10 a.m. – 4 p.m.

Local artisans are setting up shop inside Elkton businesses to offer a one-of-a-kind holiday shopping experience featuring handmade gifts, world-class wines and more.

During the Art and Wine Tour, shoppers can connect with the artisan or winemaker who made the gifts while soaking in a little small-town charm.

A highlight to each year's event is the raffle basket filled with items from local businesses. This year there are three raffle baskets and more chances to win. Enter the raffle by collecting five or more stamps from each local business visited. Some sites are open all three days; others are Friday and Saturday only.

For more information about hours and locations, visit elktonbutterflies.com

Also, from Nov. 15 – Dec. 15, the Elkton Community Education

Center (ECEC) offers the opportunity to shop for uniquely local gifts at 15850 Highway 38.

Patrons can shop online at ececstore.square.site or show up in person between Tuesday and Friday, 10 a.m. – 4 p.m. Appointments are also available.

Local gifts include handmade holiday swags and bows, hoodies, rocks, gems, books, mugs and many more knick-knacks. Gift wrapping and shipping services are also available.

On Dec. 4, is ECEC is hosting a Wreath Workshop, which is accepting registration at the ECEC website. Call 541-584-2692 for more information.

Planning from A3

itation and less energy consumption,” he said.

As an owner of the property for 40 years, he felt it had been underutilized in the past several decades.

During public and commission questions and comments, many nearby residents expressed their concern over the zone change, though many were warm to the idea of Nordin's housing ideas.

Resident Travis Olsen called the application for RC “odd and unnecessary.”

Comments critical of Nordin's application focused on concerns about increased traffic, degradation of historical buildings and even the worry that a future owner of the land would overly commercialize the land outside of Nordin's proposed vision.

RAIN Venture Catalyst Aqsa Khan spoke in favor of Nordin's commercial ideas, saying they could bring an economic benefit to the community.

Near the end of the meeting, resident Tammie Stark said her mind was changed and she was no longer worried as much about the zone change as about how the process would be done.

“I think that having small cottages on that property is a great idea,” she said. “I think supporting small business owners that could support themselves with small business ... is a great idea. I do share the concern about it being sold to a developer and it being completely leveled and paved and a bunch of apartments going in.”

Nordin responded to the community comments and said he was willing to accept an R2 zone change if the commission and community felt the commercial aspect was detrimental to or unnecessary for the neighborhood.

To fully realize his proposed without the zone change to RC, Nordin will have to make his case in a community meeting process and receive a conditional use permit.
