TO AVOID POSSIBLE TROUBLE

There is Growing Danger of a Settling the Border Question in the Northwest.

Washington, March 21.—The British ambassador, Sir Julian Pevitt, has arrived here. It is understood, to a certain extent, that a joint agreement is to be entered into in order to avert the possibility of a border dispute arising.

The argument of this is that the arrangement has been brought about between the Canadian and the American authorities.

These reports have caused considerable excitement in Washington, and efforts have been made by the authorities to secure all the information, however, other news has been expected, and the reports have served to calm the attention of official interest on the subject of extending a border line.

The situation is not likely to change, and the United States will continue to make public reports on the matter to the Canadian government.

Some important statements concerning the matter have been made, but no official representation has been made by either party, and no action has been taken.
