If it was not for the articles published from time to time in the county press of this state, complimentary to the Oregonian, which quickly find their way to the columns of Oregon's great paper, one would be inclined to think that the exchange editor on the Oregonian had gone off on a protracted spree. The Oregonian has a happy faculty of ignoring the small-fry newspaper men of the state. Of course, there is seldom a news item in the country press that is of consequence to the Oregonian, but when it does condescend to "clip" it should at least give credit for it—that's decent you know.

When Mr. Kipling sat up for the first time after his recent illness, one of the first things he did was to write the following letter to the newspapers:

"Will you kindly allow me through your columns to attempt some acknowledgement of the wonderful sympathy, affection and kindness shown towards me during my recent illness, as well as the unfailing courtesy that controlled its expression? I am not strong enough to answer letters in detail, so I must take this means of thanking, as humbly as sincerely, the countless people of good-will throughout the world who have put me under a debt I can never hope to repay. Very faithfully yours,

RUDYARD KIPLING."

The alleged "crime of '76," which during past campaigns was attributed as the cause of low prices, is not heard much of these days. People are too busy to bother their heads about it. The annual report of the department of agriculture states that the value of horses in the United States has increased $32,000,000 within a year, an average increase of more than 10 per cent. This has taken place in spite of the talk of a coming horseless era. Cattle, other than milk cows, increased 10 per cent in value. Milk cows were worth $39,500,000 more at the end of the year than at the beginning. Sheep, which could hardly be given away under the last democratic tariff, increased in value $14,000,000, and in number 1,460,000. Mules increased in value. The total increase in a year in the value of domestic animals is placed at $108,355,482 a gain of 5.74 per cent. The party that promised prosperity and was taken at its word, has abundantly fulfilled the pledge, but the measure of its good deeds and beneficial influences is still piling up.—Albany Herald-Disseminator.

Register: "The editor of the Guard places himself in a ridiculous position in his repeated sallies at the editor of the Oregonian concerning the delinquent tax list that the Portland paper is publishing, inasmuch as the Guard has published a similar list for Lane county and the epithets that he is hurling at the Oregonian will apply just as well to himself as to the Oregonian editor."

Another thing the Guard omits in its "sallies." It fails to notice that the Oregonian has not advertised levies upon personal property of delinquents to be sold at the court house, or the names of delinquent poll tax citizens to be sold as has the Guard. Neither has the Oregonian published any levies for amounts below $2 that we have noticed; whereas the Guard published numerous levies varying in amounts from a few cents up, in face of the known fact that the property levied upon would not pay the expense of advertising, and that the county would have to pay the Guard for publishing the same. The Guard is the last paper in Christendom that ought to find fault with the Oregonian on the score of publishing a delinquent tax list.—Broad-Axe.

I called at the Noonday mine and had a pleasant chat with the genial foreman, Mr. E. Jinks. They are doing development work rapidly and everything looks promising. It will not be long before the 20 stamps of the Noonday Company's splendid mill will be dropping regularly which will be music to the ears of all old Bohemians.

On my way out of camp I stopped again at the Grizzly Mountain mines the boys regaled me with music and song, and the Little Brown Jug on the table never seemed to get empty. They have a fine band of assorted instruments a banjo, violin, two harmonicas and a broom, which makes a splendid base viol. I never knew there was so much harmony in a broom till the other night. It is the old thing after their hilarious time in town. They are now at the penitentiary with hammer and drill. Boys of Bohemia I wish you good luck and prosperity.

Yours truly, SPOOKS.

WHERE HE DREW THE LINE.

He had "struck it rich" in the gold fields of Alaska and had returned to New Orleans after a year's absence, says the Times Democrat. Hungry and with a determination to become acquainted with his "first square meal in months," he went to a popular restaurant and in a breezy, mining district fashion, bellowed out: "Waiter, bring me a first class meal! Just like the Four Hundred eat! Make it swell, and darn the expense! I have gold to spend till fare-you-well." With an obsequious bow and a display of unwonted activity the waiter hustled in the necessary "outfit" and a plate of excellent consommé. The patron made short work of the soup and reached for the bunch of celery which had been placed on the table. He provided a resting place for the relish with celerity and had just finished it when the waiter brought in a large boiled lobster, garnished with lettuce. He was about to place it before the guest, but the miner waved him aside and in loud tones called out: "Say, I ordered a swell dinner and this can't go on much further. I have swallowed that plate of dish-water, and I ate the boquet, but I'm d— if I'll tackle that bug."
