Telegraphic communication from Manila chronicles the wounding of two United States soldiers near and dear to the people of this vicinity, namely Henry Wagner and Homer Dodds. The soldiers were present in the streets of Manila when they were fired upon. The officers were not informed about the firing and did not know anything until the soldiers were shot. The news reached us a few weeks ago and was received with great sorrow.

In the coming days, we will be receiving more news about the soldiers who are serving in the Philippines.

We hope for their safe return as soon as possible.
