DIED.

At his farm residence near this city last Friday, June 16 1899, Benjamin F. Harding, aged 67 years. The funeral service was held at the Cumberland Presbyterian church in this city Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Wallace officiating. A large number of friends and acquaintances was present among them being many silvered heads, who represented the pioneer settlers of this section. He was laid to rest in the Masonic cemetery west of this city.

Deceased was well known throughout Oregon, having figured conspicuously to his credit and the honor of Oregon in framing the laws and the early legislative work of the state. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1832. He came to Oregon in 1849, and settled in Marion county, where he was active and conspicuous in public affairs and influential in the councils of the democratic party during his entire residence there, for a quarter of a century or more. He is a lawyer by profession, but devoted most of his time to politics and farming, and in his time was regarded as one of the shrewdest politicians in Oregon. He was United States attorney before the organization of the state government, was three times a member of the territorial legislature. In 1862 the legislative assembly elected him to fill the unexpired term of Edward D. Baker, in the United States senate. Baker having been killed at the head of his regiment in the battle at Bull's Bluff, Senator Harding served out the term and was succeeded, March 4, 1865, by George H. Williams.

At the beginning of the war of the rebellion James W. Nesmith, Asabel Bush and Benjamin F. Harding were the ruling spirits of the union or Douglas democracy of Oregon, while General Joseph Lane, Delazon Smith and one or two others were the leaders of the Breckinson or pro-slavery democrats who sympathized with the secessionists of the South. They were bitterly hostile to each other. Nesmith was elected to a full term of six years and Baker to a term of four years in the United States senate by a combination between the Douglas democrats and republicans, and Harding was elected in the same way to fill out Baker's term. Soon after the close of his term in the senate, Mr. Harding retired to a farm in Marion county, and a few years later moved to farm near Cottage Grove.
