THE DREAM THAT CAME TRUE.

THERE was a hint of yesterdays in many of the gold and red colors shaded from softest green and deepest red and brown, and the leaves that have fallen, but it is also of the bright sunlight on the peaks of the distant hills. Today's flower, the white rose of winter, is as perfect and pure as that of yesterdays. Today's sunshine, the gold of early morning, is as warm and bright as that of yesterdays. Today's snow, the clean, white snow of winter, is as soft and gentle as that of yesterdays. Today's wind, the crisp, cold wind of winter, is as sharp and strong as that of yesterdays. Today's blue sky, the deep, rich blue of winter, is as clear and vast as that of yesterdays. Today's sun, the brilliant, fiery sun of winter, is as warm and strong as that of yesterdays. Today's moon, the silver, shining moon of winter, is as full and bright as that of yesterdays. Today's stars, the twinkling, sparkling stars of winter, are as brilliant and beautiful as those of yesterdays.

"The dream that came true."

If there is a dream that has come true, it is the dream of the American people. It is the dream of a world at peace, a world of brotherhood, a world of understanding. It is the dream of a world where freedom and justice reign supreme. It is the dream of a world where all nations live together in harmony and prosperity. It is the dream of a world where the spirit of progress and achievement is forever alive. It is the dream of a world where the people of the world are united in the common cause of building a better world for all.

"The dream that came true."

It is the dream of the United States of America, a dream of a nation that has overcome great trials and tribulations to become a beacon of hope and freedom. It is the dream of a nation that has overcome great challenges and obstacles to become a strong and prosperous nation. It is the dream of a nation that has overcome great injustices and inequalities to become a nation of equals and opportunities. It is the dream of a nation that has overcome great natural disasters and crises to become a nation of resilience and strength.
